Build ur own private VPN with wireguard or such or you can buy a private vpn then use it on a a device directly or even running on a Virtual environment, so you're own network is not giving enough data :)!

bro i wanna use terminal but i need linux do you know i can get for free or paid?

Kat? Upton - October 2, 2022, 4:19 pm

Like blackd.t said, a lot of research, trial and error. Hacking is a pretty broad term so just research what you are actually wanting to learn how to do and go from there.

interbellum - October 2, 2022, 4:25 pm

A lot of research mostly. The best way to start is taking a few courses though.

Search for ircnow they give you a free vpssec to learn openbsd or if jrmu accepts to give you a debian instance so you can enhance alot and learn how mail works how webserver is setup and then when u gather enough information on how they work

Then is easier to understand and do more researches

DashPHP - October 3, 2022, 1:35 am

They learn by practicing. Rinse and repeat and you'll be a pro.

HiddenEyE - October 3, 2022, 4:31 am hacking is good to learn. but it is broad as others has said.

Charlie Sheen - October 3, 2022, 4:44 am

Start small, there's some guides in the Hack section. Use those to build your confidence and understanding.

Shaggy - October 3, 2022, 5:21 am

I used to do lots of Research and play HTB to further challenge the knowledge I recently required. Sometimes I do Bug Bounties too for testing vulnerabilities legally.

Goku - October 3, 2022, 5:29 am

Maybe, by first learning how to build/create things. If you know how something is made, it's easier to know how to break it.

yeah

"htb is vomit"??? just because you cant pass the registration does not mean its bad ??? but if you dont wanna use htb use tryhackme, they offer vms which you can boot up in your browser so you dont have to install anything. but why do you not want to install anything, what is the issue.

(Oct 3, 2022 03:48 PM)Incog Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Frankly, everything I have learned within the windows malware space has been through learning via news articles, creating projects, asking people in the area for information, and reading proof of concepts

News articles are a fantastic way of having information broken down for you in a well formatted, concise format. Technical analysis are also a good way to see an insight into how threat actors/developers have created a tool, and the ways they have improved it over time. For code, I mostly just made access tools, can't say I ever made any form of crypter lol.

Courses are great and all, but most of the time they can be outdated since the area of "hacking" is such an evolving topic you can't learnt it once and then it stays the same, like Physics or mf idk Astronomy. Complement a course with other ways of learning, if you choose to do one i need a good youtube tutorial or website

There's plenty of tutorials around here that you can read.

Not that hard.

All hackers learn hacking. :) Simply put.

z x v - October 4, 2022, 8:10 pm

Research and ambition, trial and error, opsec and awareness.

Some of the best illicit hackers are very young in age. You have the internet, you can learn.

good luck lol, its a lot of research and patience

SIM-4932765 - November 1, 2022, 9:33 am

At the beginning I learned a lot by watching youtube videos, back when youtube allowed a lot of shit to be posted. Now the rules changed a lot, I recommend you Udemy (warez disallowed), they have a lot of free stuff that will help you a lot learning the basics.
