

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Retail Holidays

Seaking - October 5, 2022, 11:10 am

I was out at lowes yesterday and they have already moved all the Halloween stuff from the floor to two small isles and Christmas trees and lights are already up. I thought it was nuts, but in a few more stores around here it's the same thing. Anyone else notice this? Hopefully it's just a local thing where i'm at.

SIM-5244392 - October 5, 2022, 11:15 am

It all starts too early. Christmas covers 4 months of the year it's insane

Pikachu - October 5, 2022, 11:23 am

Walmart put up all the Xmas stuff in the garden section, Halloween is still the main focus

Seaking - October 5, 2022, 11:28 am

(Oct 5, 2022 11:15 AM)SIM-5244392 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) It all starts too early. Christmas covers 4 months of the year it's insane it really feels like it. I used to really love christmas, but when I have to hear the music and deal with it for 3+ months it loses it's charm quick.

(Oct 5, 2022 11:23 AM)Pikachu Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Walmart put up all the Xmas stuff in the garden section, Halloween is still the main focus Ey that's good to hear. Our local Walmart is about 1/2 Halloween and Christmas, but I would take a guess that in another week it'll probably be down to about 1/3.

Pikachu - October 5, 2022, 1:58 pm

Just walked into hobby lobby and 80% of the store is Christmas with little Halloween

mickeh - October 5, 2022, 2:02 pm

Because they know the sooner they put it out the sooner people will buy it

Evading - October 5, 2022, 2:16 pm

The stores in my country have had Christmas sweets & chocolate out since the end of August / start of September.

Hipster Ariel - October 5, 2022, 3:44 pm

Agree, It's all put up too early. But it is not only a matter of retailers milking holidays (though most of it is).

- 1) Things have to be put up in advance so people can buy and decorate before the holiday.
- 2) Companies prefer to be early rather than miss dates

Zeus - October 5, 2022, 4:00 pm

Christmas actually isn't so far away it's crazy it goes so quick.

Charlie Sheen - October 6, 2022, 4:45 am

Eventually it's going to sell, they want to get as much in the store as possible.