Thread: Ethereum Shanghai Upgrade

shreder - October 17, 2022, 3:26 pm

Since the merge was a stunning success both the community and developers were able to collaborate on the biggest upgrades in blockchain history.

It's time for more improvements with the upcoming Shanghai Upgrade, which MAY bring withdrawals to staking as well as protodank sharding.

Article about the upgrade:

That is good news for ETH less gas fee, fast transactions, high deflation rate ,less energy consumption.

If it's 40-400TB a year then the size of storage would be petabytes. Which is nonsense. Do you even know what a petabyte of storage looks like?

[Video: https://youtu.be/EtZXMj_gUjU]

Do you think hundreds of thousands of stakers are running both execution and consensus clients on raspberry pi's and Intel nucs really have a couple petabytes packed into that small frame?

Atleast when trying to spread false information, make it believable.

shreder - October 18, 2022, 1:13 pm

You cant use third parties for running your execution layer. You cannot fetch data from third parties like infura for validation duties. Any attempts to say that validators will use data from third parties is incorrect.

Guess it wasn't smart enough to know that. Nice try. You did good, but I did better.

I'm staking at home. I will never need to run off a datacenter because the requirements are so low.

Literally running off a used 2TB SSD I got on sale for $99 2 years ago, running like a champ both execution and consensus clients.

You can spew all the misinformation you want but fact off the matter is I have been running my little at home node for nearly 2 years now with no stopping in sight. You can't stop me you poser banker.

How about you grow some balls and run a eth validator.

I'm looking forward to the Shanghai upgrade we may see EIP's that will make L2'S even faster and cheaper than the sub 1 cent tx's they current cost.

ETH IS KING.

Can the merge really be called a success when you currently cannot even withdraw the staked coins or rewards?

Doesn't seem like they've done much tbh. They will drag this thing out as long as they can and people will keep buying it until there's nothing left but false hopes. I believe they definitely did the switch to POS prematurely in order to stay in the news and compete with Bitcoin and satisfy current investors by providing absolutely nothing.

Depending on how long this takes the price could dump if all those staked coins are unlocked all at once. Talk about MTGOX repayment on steroids.

Every hater: First the Beacon chain was never going to come, then next was merge was never going to come, now it's withdrawals will never come.

If you want to put money where your mouth is, open a wager of a $100,000 that ETH withdrawals won't come send it to Omni we can start this bet. Or are you too poor?

SUI-3183372 - October 18, 2022, 2:01 pm

What is the 10x in this picture? Is there a reason for it, like has Ethereum stated they want to increase <insert concept here> by 10x? Or is it because Elon Musk suggested that Doge just 'increase block size by 10x and block time by 10x', so Vitalik is demonstrating what would happen if Ethereum arbitrarily increased their parameters by 10x? Granted, even without the 10x the figures at hand are still large, I'm just trying to get a better understanding of why.

What I said is that they've done so little and you along with the media talk as if they've made huge advancements.

I think it's possible withdrawals will come one day but who knows how long that could be.

Your staked coins are in the hands of Vitalik and the Ethereum foundation and I predict they will delay, delay, delay... Just like they did with this merge and when or IF they finally write the code it could end up like MTGOX repayment on steroids.

Less than 6k ETH added to the supply since merge
<https://ultrasound.money/> compared to 404k ETH had we still been on PoW. You didn't even research how withdrawal mechanism would work. Withdrawals grow exponentially long as more people un stake, to maintain network stability. This will eventually reach an equilibrium point. If it's anything like the merge where staked ETH skyrocketed after the upgrade. Withdrawals upgrade will bring even more stakers.

Not to mention you cant question the resolve of the ETH community willing to lock up 3 years with no merge or withdrawal date posted. ETH Stakers are as hardcore as you can get.

It's not like PoW miners where you can migrate to the next chain willy nilly and sell off all your assets as you have no bind to a particular network...

You know nothing, if you stopped being a blind hater for a second maybe you wouldnt be so God dam poor.

on another note, the Shanghai upgrade is going to make L2's so much faster so much cheaper.

You're quite obnoxious. I'm not being a "Hater" you're incredibly hypocritical.

I don't believe that stakers have only generated 6,000 Ethereum.

A lot of Ethereum has been burned considering that on September 15 the supply of Ethereum was 122,377,095 and on September 24th the supply of Ethereum was 122,505,337. On September 29 the supply was 122,581,661

Not only 6000 ETH was added to the supply since then A LOT more was it's just that a lot was also burned but don't those stakers still have those rewards?

Today the supply of Ethereum on 10/18/2022 is 122,373,863

All those rewards are locked are they not and I'm sure it's a lot more than 6000 ETH that were generated from those rewards it'll be like MTGOX repayment on steroids when people come to collect that which they can't collect now.

Call me poor call me any names I don't care. I only seek approval from the Almighty God not from some man like you who idolizes Ethereum as their God and who is so incredibly disrespectful.

If I'm wrong go ahead and correct me I'll gladly accept my stupidity as I've done before. but it seems you're beyond that. I'm much more rich than you my friend.

Considering my Holdings are in BITCOIN and yours are in Ethereum I'm incredibly richer than you but that's not what I was talking about when I said I'm richer than you but that may be the only thing you can understand.

Need I say more?

We are below the supply at the time of the merge back in September over a month ago.

The withdrawal mechanism only allows for so many validators to exit at once, and the time becomes longer as more validators try to exit. Meaning only a limited amount of ETH can flow out, this does not take into account that the withdrawal upgrade will be a huge upside increasing stakers.

As you can see deposits for staking jumped big time after the merge.

The entire supply yes has decreased YOU'RE correct only because I pointed that out to you. You were just saying it has grown by 6,000 coins which I never had refuted in the first place so I don't know why you're arguing nonsense with me. ANYWAYS You continually miss the entire point I've been trying to make.

The rewards continue to stack up and the rewards are a lot more then just 6,000 ETH coins, and now I'm hearing that they will be controlling and limiting when people can and can't pull their money out? So we've just gotten to the point that you should've immediately mentioned instead of going off on your rant on how I don't know anything and that I'm poor and just a hater. Sorry that I don't have 100,000 dollars to make a ridiculous gamble based on something I'm not even claiming.

As far as the mechanism that stops people from collecting their rewards. You're talking about code that doesn't even exist. Lmao You have know idea how it will all work or when it will happen and you can't even provide numbers on how much they will allow to be removed and it already sounds terrible.

They've delivered on so LITTLE and their talk is huge! and here you're calling it all a wonderful Success when it's no where near completion. Gosh darn you're biased. Keep listening to everything your master Vitalik says you've obviously done well for yourself. You're a fool and you know as much as a monkey and you're arguments are child-like. You're incredibly poor compared to me and I'm poor myself.

You really have to be a moron.

First, you did not even know that not all stakers would be able to withdraw at once. Then you thought the code did not exist. Now you think the numbers don't exist either. Literally delusional.

I hope you know PoS inflation for block subsidies is around 1,600 ETH per day, compared to what it was with PoW at 13,000 that is insignificant. Mind you stakers have little to no overhead. I literally pay $50 a year for electricity for my node.

And now after triggering yourself for an entire hour you've finally gotten to the subject we were talking about only now you're extra inflamed.

Being embarrassed by someone like you would be quite embarrassing in of itself.

By your own statement "It's time for more improvements with the upcoming Shanghai Upgrade, which MAY bring withdrawals to staking as well as protodank sharding." You have no clue. Safe to say you're clueless.

How can these even be considered "improvements" these aren't just little improvements, these are literal functions that Haven't been coded in yet that are necessary for the Network to function and you've just called it a success and it's not even in existence.

Unlike you, I will agree and say I am wrong about the fact that the numbers have been discussed. I was wrong about that claim. You won't even admit that you ranted about moron shit that I didn't even say for an entire hour and now you finally want to discuss what I've been trying to talk with you about? haha ok dude. But you don't even want to do that. Clearly your priority is to embarrass me on a subject that you can't even be embarrassed on. Thus why you're saying "you're poor, you're a hater, you're a moron" instead of discussing the subject that I came on the thread to comment about.

They've still done very LITTLE and here you're claiming it's all a wonderful success. You have no idea.

Crazy, that hundreds of thousands of Ethereum have been generated since the merge and none of it can be width drawn until the creators hard fork the entire chain again at an unspecified time in the future.

But EVEN then "when" they code that into the network they will lock in the rewards so you have little control over what you can take out. But don't worry you say, they will incentivize you to withdraw.

Have fun speculating and trying to pump the price with the news delay after delay. A perfect example of this is your thread here you've just posted.

What do you actually know? Who are you arguing with? Doesn't seem like you're replying to anything I've said. I understand nothing according to you but I corrected myself when I made an error. What?

Did you even know over 200k Ethereum has been minted since the merge?

I wonder where we can see the actual numbers for how much has been paid in rewards.

It could be even over 500k ETH it could even be millions in number of ETH rewarded and the greatest thing about that is you cannot even access it. And when they finally are able to access your rewards you'll have to wait in line to withdraw them. Lmfao.

I only know it's been a few hundred thousand because I've been tracking the supply but that doesn't account for the ethereum that's been burned.

So what happens when people start "attempting" to take profits. Will they even be able to withdraw. I know right now there's no possible way and there's no time set in the future. Oh what a wonderful success this has been Shredder. Seems more like a wonderful failure.

You're trying to say having the numbers in mind and the having code ready is the same thing? If the code is ready where is it? Why is it not implemented. Oh yeah It doesn't exist.

Explain to me how it's a "upgrade" Aren't they just trying to finish what they were supposed to do with this merge? I'd like to get more perspectives on this issue, because obviously if this is as bad as it sounds it won't be something that isn't being discussed. Curious what sort of solutions are being proposed.

Additionally, would validator nodes be seeing all of this data, or just full nodes?

Validators run both execution and consensus clients so they would have and see all this data. Anyone with the right mind should know that the false claim of 400TB's a year is bogus.

Now fudsters might say well validators will use a third parties consensus layer. But you cannot use third party consensus client endpoints to perform validation duties.

So now fudsters go back to well gl getting dosed by 400TB's a year. If any of that was true, one I have fucking insane amount of $ in SSD'S multiple petabyte of SSD's. I would have 10gbps bandwidth at home. Sure...

That's considering Ethereum was only launched in 2015 and Bitcoin was already established and had pioneered the way for all crypto currency's that came behind it including Ethereum.

Now Ethereum is an established Crypto Currency in our ecosystem holding #2 in Market Cap.

If you caught the wave at the beginning good for you. (The Bitcoin wave was a lot bigger) Most people don't and what you're mentioning with your statistics is that wave. For example you have people like BV1 searching for that wave in new Alt Coins.

If it wasn't for all the bitards honestly I didn't think Withdrawals would have been included in the Shanghai Upgrade at all. All the trolling has fired up the community and developers. Progress was not on pace to be completed at the time for Shanghai fork, there was no consensus to prioritize withdrawal development from the community or the nearly dozen different client teams. Today's Ethereum Core Devs meeting many voiced that withdrawal development should be prioritized and would be considered urgent.

I can see from recent updates and progress tracking of code client teams have seriously picked up the pace, devnets are here and being tested.

Having closely followed the progress of the beacon chain launch, altair upgrade, merge upgrade. I would say it is very much possible for them to be completed for the Shanghai Upgrade.

Would not buy again. 0 out of 5 stars. Maybe I could leave my review on amazon since I hear they're hosting a majority of ETH nodes these days. lol

Rest of my BTC is on robinhood. Waiting to withdraw the final 0.05 next week. Could buy another Bitcoin at these prices but I don't want to put all my eggs into crypto currency. Extending to other places now that I'm comfortable with my position. (Def not eth)

I guess you figured out how to hard-fork the United States dollar back then.

Offer is still up if you want to stop being a broke boy. DM me again. I will forgive you if you repent.

Offer is still up if you want me to buy you a bible.

It's an offer I won't ever take away from you.

Sorry, not interested in ETH. Don't know why I want something that is run and controlled by a specific group of people. Reminds me of the Federal Reserve. Glad we at least both own bitcoin. That's something we have in common. I know you're secretly a Bitcoin maxi... Don't lie!

Ah yes, Bitcoin the shitcoin that 4 entities mine 80% of the blocks. Where everyone else twiddles their thumbs while a few make all the decisions for you, while they tell you to stay quiet and just hodl. Infested with law enforcement-connected 'privacy' wallets and censorship-ridden onramps disguised to be "pro decentralization".

You don't even mine, you really have no say.

Btw send me the bible, I'll sell it for some ETH.

Ive considered selling all my BTC for Monero, you should look into it.

If you really think that, you should just trade all your BTC for ETH. It's your choice. I advise against it though. Ethereum has their own Central Bank system. Just be careful.

I'm going to buy ETH after selling it, need to get hyped for the Shanghai Upgrade.

Please remove my address from your quote. All I wanted to do was sell the bible for more ETH to hype myself up for the upgrade.

I can't wait to hear you deny this 90 days from now if the fork doesn't activate like you did last time:
Just like how you went dead silent after the beacon chain launched?

Just like how you went dead silent after the merge?

You are praying the forks never happen everytime.

hard fork Ethereum without staking anything.

I'm asking you, as an Ethereum shareholder, what you will tell the rest of the Ethereum shareholders if their deposits and dividends are not released by Vitalik in the next 90 days.
The development is dependent on the community writing and testing their code on the all the testnets successfully.

The release date is never confirmed but it is being worked on hard to get it out within 90 days by me and the community which includes you too since you are a big ETH holder also.

I don't know who this vitamin you keep mentioning.

But 90 days or w.e it is for q1 is hopeful I am working hard on it with the rest of the community on developing and testing the code.

Glad to have you apart of the ETH community.

The nonstop dump that will occur if Vitalik ever releases the money of his investors will be unlike anything we've ever seen.

Not sure what you are mumbling about but I'm glad you are hyped for the withdrawal as well

(Jan 6, 2023 04:44 PM)Focus Broken Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) That's okay, I'll break down the numbers for you so you get some perspective of how devastating the unlock will be for the price of ETH:

Mt Gox repayment coins: 140k BTC (0.66% of total supply)

DAO hack: 3.6m ETH (3% of current supply)

Unwithdrawable stake: 16.8m ETH (14% of current supply)

Mt gox was not voluntary action

184B BTC 2010 hack was not a voluntary action

Staking requires voluntary action from holder to initiate. I stake and I will never withdraw. The consensus from the Ethereum community is the same. Many will continue to stake more after the upgrade.

Re you planning to stake more?

Pending entry validators are outpacing withdraws. Which are mostly skimmed to stake more. Bullish AF as more people start to stake.
