Small supply

Great tokenomics

Great roadmap

Great project

Don't you think?

Posted this before on a old thread about Quant:

Quant seems like a strong project with close to no marketing. We don't see QNT bringing in new customers/users, we don't hear about what's being built on QNT, but this is by design. QNT focuses on partnerships with large institutions, enterprises, and governments. QNT see regulation as a certainty, and their safety first approach is designed to ensure that they stay in the good graces of regulators when that giant pile of shit inevitably hits the fan. They're building something seemingly impressive, and they're taking their time to ensure that nobody can take it away from them when it's ready.

Keep in mind this is a coin that will cater to banks, governments, enterprises, not your average individual. One of their first milestones was to achieve interoperability with Ripple. While Overledger is impressive, I'm afraid we won't see many use cases that we get to directly interact with.
