Thread: Looking For 1 Person To Help Me Build Job Hiring Website.

Blockonome - October 20, 2022, 4:40 am

Hi guys,

I am looking for a programmer who I can pay to build me a website consisting of the following items.

Job recruitment website /

- Businesses can log in, make a advert for their hiring position and receive Email response when someone applies.
- Businesses will either get sent resume to their Email or will be able to view it on the website.
- People can go on the website and apply to jobs with .pdf or .doc files.
- People can search for specific jobs in specific regions and countries around the world.
- People can create a profile and see what jobs they have applied for and how long ago it was.

Let me know your price and whether you can do all of the requirements.

Interesting. Kind of something like UpWork or eLance?

Hey Blockonome sadly, I can't help you with this because I'm too busy. But, on my current job, my boss is using this service to create such things. Maybe, take a look at it. It doesn't require much coding, and you can create that project yourself.

You know there are plenty of pre built sites as well on codecanyon for this same thing
