Thread: Elon bringing back Vine ?

noureddinemerradou - October 31, 2022, 5:04 pm

this Poll has acquired more than 4.5 Million votes with 70% of them being positive .

at first glance the topic might seem unfit for being in this section but, The reason I am sharing this as a Cryptocurrency topic is because the vine reboot seems to be a follow up to the same trend that twitter has been following

It has NFT pfps, NFT embeds, & started a decentralized social network back in 2019, named "Bluesky" and with Elon being inspired by Wechat, it seems like he want to create almost a sort of an ecosystem or a metaverse as discussed in croissant's tweet , Elon musk is following a plan it seems and the twitter acquisition itself in so arbitrary Billy boy stunt what do you think ?

Vine does have a place in America tho, TikTok is is hated there because of the fact that it comes from China.

I'd like to see him bring back Vine. To be honest I'll probably not use it, but he is a game changer.

I saw a tweet from MrBeast to Elon. If he can make something hard to copy and original then all the other companies must revamp their platforms too to keep up.

Why is this in the crypto section?

if you're asking me then my reasoning is outlined above, if you think the topic isn't even remotely close to cryptocurrencies then give your argument and choose a more fitting section

Vine was great. Vine closing gave rise to TikTok. Bring it back imho.

That would be a great idea and gives the possibility to challenge TikTok.

Couldn't agree more.

China doesn't allow any foreign operated sites in their country without extensive oversight and restrictions. No idea why TikTok is allowed to exist outside China. Vine could be a very viable competitor.
