Thread: Anyone into unit testing/Automated testing here?

kookur - November 3, 2022, 9:38 am

I have some tasks assigned on Azure that I need help with if someone can help.

Generic threads like this are asking users to do the work for them rather than assisting, which rarely happens.

IE. Is this Selenium? Cypress? Integration tests? Unit tests? What are we testing?
Jest Javascript.

I don't think you can automate unit testing. I'm assuming you're a developer. And some are difficult than others. Unit testing on cloud services isn't the same as a button.

Why would you not be able to automate unit testing? This makes no sense.

Yes I'm a developer, I've been learning Jest (For testing Javascript web applications). I'm new to this unit testing thing so needed help if someone is experienced. I have to test my company's project.

It sounds like he is doing contract work promising to be able to do the job when he doesn't have the skills to do it. So, he lurks on here looking for people dumb enough to do this for free but have the skillsets.

I have seen this happen alot on HF and other programming websites where people help for free but won't realize until it's too late.

This guy said earlier in other posts he is going to learn javascript and web development. I am just giving everyone a fair warning and a heads up.
You're an idiot.
