In 2015, the venture capitalist Stewart Alsop wrote an open letter to Musk on Medium, titled “Dear @ElonMusk: You should be ashamed of yourself,” in which he complained about poor organization at a Tesla Model X launch event. (He said he had to put down a $5,000 deposit on the new car to attend, that the event started nearly two hours late, that the organizers didn’t provide adequate food to the guests, and so on.)

In response to Alsop’s many grievances, the free speech-loving Musk canceled his Model X pre-order. Alsop was beside himself. In a follow-up post, the venture capitalist wrote, “I am a little taken aback to be banned by Tesla ... I am mostly sorry not to be able to participate in the automobile revolution that Tesla started.”

The Toco toucan in the Pantanal region of Brazil has the largest beak, relative to its body, of any bird. While that big bright bill is terrific at plucking and peeling fruit, and defending against predators, its greatest use may be in regulating temperature. The toco toucan's lightweight keratin beak is underlain with blood vessels which help dissipate body heat.
