Thread: 11 Coins that will bring me nice returns

PR1V473 - December 7, 2022, 2:36 pm

Hello,

I have additional $35,000 which I will invest into my current portfolio of ($50,000 as of 7th of December) which I think will easily make me a millionaire.

I hold currently:

- AZERO (28,000 $AZERO @ $1.32 AVG)
- POLKADOT (2,962 $DOT @ $14.50 AVG)
- POLYGON (3,234 $MATIC @ $0.77 AVG)
- NEAR (1,038 $NEAR @ $1.44 AVG)
- RADIX (22,236 $XRD @ $0.13 AVG))
- ENJIN (1,799 $ENJIN @ $0.28 AVG)
- XX NETWORK (5,124 $XX @ $0.49 AVG)

My plan on where to invest the $35,000 are: (divided into 3 categories)

The TOP crypto category that consists of 52%:

- 25% POLKADOT ($7,500 @ Price Target Of $4,75)
- 12% POLYGON ($3,600 @ Price Target Of $0,50)
- 15% NEAR ($4,500 @ Price Target Of $1,20)

The RISKY crypto category that consists of 28%:

- 9% ALEPH ZERO ($2,700 @ Price Target Of $0,65)
- 7% FANTOM ($2,100 @ Price Target Of $0,18)
- 5% ENJIN ($1,500 @ Price Target Of $0,20)
- 7% THETA ($2,100 @ Price Target Of $0,65)

The SUPER-RISKY crypto category that consists of 20%:

- 5% ERGO ($1,500 @ Price Target Of $1,10)
- 5% MINA ($1,500 @ Price Target Of $0,25)
- 5% MOONBEAM ($1,500 @ Price Target Of $0,25)
- 5% KADENA ($1,500 @ Price Target Of $0,75)

Now I want to hear the forum's opinion on my portfolio.

What am I missing?

Which coin I should remove (Why?)?

Which coin I should absolutely have(Why?)?

Not having BTC, ETH, and LTC isn't a great portfolio imo.

I have A0 (40%) & XRD (20%) as a majority, but I like having the rest allocated to blue chips mentioned above.

I used to have ENJ, but dropped it for more LTC and it worked out.

PR1V473 - December 7, 2022, 3:25 pm

Yeah, I dislike holding BTC for this bullrun. My plan is to take as much profit as I can (selling 75% of my portfolio when BTC reaches $150,000-160,000), then converting 25% of those 75% into BTC, and keeping the 50% ready for the next bear market, and I will be going full BTC then and this will be my retirement fund.

If everything goes as smooth, with EVERY ALT-COIN that I wrote in the first post, ONLY to reach their previous ATH (to not go above their previous ATH), I will be at around $1mil-$1.2mil. That's my rather pessimistic expectation. In reality, I could easily hit $1.5mil-$1.8mil when BTC goes to new ATH, the alt coins won't just sleep. So converting 50% into USDT would mean around $500,000-$600,000 will be sitting in USDT ready to invest for the next bear market and approximately $200,000-$250,000 will be converted into BTC (If it reaches $150,000 then it would mean that I can buy 1.2-1.8BTC).

I have also around $50,000 in GPUs ready for when the bull cycle happens, there will be very profitable coins to mine with them so I'm expecting some monthly income from there as well as staking $POLKADOT.

(Dec 7, 2022 04:26 PM)Yung Zel Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) What is the price target? Are you shorting these coins? I wrote the price target for buying in, for selling I have only their previous ATH set as a target. Normally, 2 to 3 coins won't reach their ATH, while 4-5 of them can go 2X or 3X of their previous ATH and the rest can just hit their ATH. I'm not a greedy person ?

Nice, yea the general approach has always been accumulate more sats from your alts. I just like having some in case they bust, since you'll still have your blue chips for the long-run. It's a good de-risk method.

The crypto market will be fine if a majority of those go to 0, it's happened time after time.

Honestly though, I think all your coins are shitcoins and very few will find success in next big bull run. Just my opinion. Explain which are shitcoins, and give your valid and honest opinion on them. I think MoonBeam, Ergo and Theta are SO-SO buys (they might just do 2X or 3X, but they won't drop in value since we are CLOSE to the bottom if not we already did hit the bottom, and they have not evaporated. Everyone of these coins have active dev team and community behind them and some are backed up by big VCs (I know it's not good to have VC backed coins, but some are).

I think you're missing SAND and some LTC. And even with a $50k investment, getting to $1m will not be easy. $50k into Bitcoin is most likely the easiest way to 20x into a $1m imho with the minimal amount of risk. But that's just not a sexy investment for most people.

You're just making a lot of bets imho. That you could just do better with a smaller portfolio. But maybe you got it right.

If you're looking for high risk high reward, look at all the L1 and Gaming cryptos. They're the ones who will likely get a very nice bull run if they can pickup the momentum. But again, high risk so DYOR.

To name a few others aside from what's already shared on the thread...
Moonriver $MOVR

Altura $ALU

Vulcan Forged $PYR

Gala $GALA

Even if you got lucky and blindly picked one succeeding coin investment, that success of that one coin results in the death of the other ten \(over the long term\). Unless your return on the winner is >10x, you won't even break even from your losses on the other coins. I am not a Bitcoin maxi, well, not this bull cycle anyway. And I do believe that many of the coins that I buy in will perform great. Some might do a 2X only, but who cares really. As long as they don't drop more than my price buy-in range.

PR1V473 - December 8, 2022, 4:33 am

(Dec 8, 2022 05:28 AM)Focus Broken Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'm not referring to Bitcoin at all since it's not one of the 11 coins you listed. I'm saying that since everything you are investing in is a competitor against everything else you are investing in, the success of one of your investments effectively guarantees the failure of the other 10.

For example, let's say "Fantom" (7% of your portfolio) becomes the world's currency. That means that Polkadot, Polygon, Near, Azero, Enjin, Theta, Ergo, Mina, Moonbeam, and Kadena (93% of your portfolio) do not become the world's currency. In order to just break even from the losses on the other 10, you need Fantom to hit a 15x return, not a 2x return. I am not talking that Fantom becomes the world's currency, LOL. These are all good projects according to me, and when the next bull market hits each and everyone of these coins will make nice returns. Wanna bet $5,000 that my portfolio will be at least $1 mil by the peak of next bull market?

PR1V473 - December 8, 2022, 4:52 am

Yeah, you have your own way of thinking, and I do have my own. You are telling me that in the previous bull market, while Bitcoin was making higher highs, the top 25 cryptos were just sleeping? Nah my friend, you're a Bitcoin maxi and that's why you are talking like that. The amount of shit-coins that peaked and made ASTONISHING gains is absurd to me, but by no means any of those coins that I will invest in are shitcoins.

I am not talking about what crypto will take the throne. I am investing into coins that will most likely make me good gains. I am not betting my life savings here, hehe. That's why I have Polkadot, Matic and Near as my top buys. I admit, I might have over-bought on Aleph Zero and that's more like a gambling but I am pretty sure they can offer good things in the next bull market.

One question though, WHEN BITCOIN hits it's new ATH, will my coins go down in value?
YES or NO

Most of the market is down way more than Bitcoin. And when the market moves, it will be led by Bitcoin. You'll take a sigh of relief in about 18 months. Until then, just keep doing what you're doing.

Is there a specific reason you're bullish on SAND? A lot of projects have dropped entertaining the idea of using them because they have like 40 concurrent players. Do you see it recovering?

PR1V473 - December 8, 2022, 2:13 pm

Just did a 30% purchase of my initial $30,000 and I increased it to $35,000. I saw the MACD overlap today, it might be a false call to a bullish short momentum potential, but also might be a $20,000 increase and then a new low to $14,500-ish level.

If it goes above $24,000-25,000 I'll just unload along the way, but I might be right and we'll see the new low by January 05 to January 12.

I don't think one coin is better than the other, just because I believe in my theory that it's not a necessity to think 1 will be king, and the rest will fail. Oh and also, these are YOUR questions that I don't have to give an answer to. It's funny, you are very arrogant in all of your replies, you have knowledge, I can see that, but you lack social communication skills. That's the issue, there isn't one from what I've seen, everything on Solana is growth capped from a market cap perspective. You could pick up some SHDW which is currently at 0.08 usd w/ 16.799 FDV from 1.9 usd like 100m FDV.

I'm buying "Super Shadowy Coder Club" and then using the limited yield on SHDW to farm the coin so I can dump on recovery atm. An unstaked item is like 120 SOL and yields 10k SHDW which on recovery to previous levels could be around 19k for a 1.2kish investment.

Ofc this is high risk because im betting on the genesysgo team.

In terms of off Solana I hardly keep up with anything, I'm not a fan of these sandbox games the problem is I just don't see a reason for SAND, I could be completely wrong

I don't see how you do it because you don't hold Bitcoin. The only true market mover. You think any of those alts are going to 100x without Bitcoin doing 25-50x? Meanwhile you've got a spread that makes me believe half or more of those will end up as losers.

So that's a 5x for Bitcoin and if that portfolio matches the 5x it will still only be worth about $600k and that's assuming that's the average from all those coins. I don't see it. I see some winners and losers and in most situations people overwhelming pick too many losers.

If you know AZERO return will beat all others, why invest in others? I think your portfolio is telling us that you are having FOMO. Take a deep breath, think about each coin why you invested in. Balance it out with higher risk, lower risk(BTC/ETH). You should have only 6 coins imo. Take it from someone who did the same what you are doing in 2018 (and still not a millionaire)

I had $xxx,xxx in alts too. Now it's about 20% of the value. My Bitcoin holdings are the only real value in my portfolio that makes sense and isn't just gambling on a moon bet.

I'll be honest, I think you should sell it all and buy BTC. Holding 4 BTC waiting for the $250k ($1m) sounds like a much stronger and more realistic play than hoping a dozen alts are part of the next bull run.

You actually come close to 5 BTC in value. Yeah, but my plan is to go maximum profit in this bull cycle and when I think it will be at the top ($120,000) I'll sell all of my alts for 80% of the value, and keep it for the next bear bottom which I think it will be right about $35,000-40,000 range. Then I am going 80% BTC and 20% ETH with whatever I sell at the previous top (Dec2024-Jan2025-Feb2025) and it's retirement money for not only myself, but a good money fund for my children too. You should be 80% into BTC NOW...$30k BTC is a discount.

Every bullrun has a new set of alts that do that magic 100x because of speculators like yourself. Way too much competition in the alt space and just when you think something like Radix or A0 is gonna be the next big thing, something else comes along and becomes the next big thing. End of the day it's always Bitcoin which is at the top of the chart. Not some of the time, all of the time.

When taking such a huge bet with every nickel you got, why would you do it with the highest risk choices? It's just a poor choice imho. It seems like a gamblers mentality of bet it all, win huge or loss it all. Because those alts you've chosen, some might be winners, but a lot of them might drop significantly. In the end you just might end up even if you're lucky but meanwhile you've taken mortgages and I'll tell you right now, if you just put it all into Bitcoin you'd experience the best outcome.

I'd take a bet with you that each and everyone of my alts will make new ATHs in the bullrun. My price range is:

$DOT - $75-85

$AZERO - $8-12

$NEAR - $14-18

$FANTOM - $4.50-5.50

$MINA - $6-8

$SUI - $10-14

While my AVG for these is:

$DOT - $9.58

$AZERO - $1.23

$NEAR - $1.63

$FANTOM - $0.352

$MINA - $0.763

$SUI - $0.29

I have watched my entire portfolio go from $120,000 to low $20,000-25,000 when the FTX crash happened with Luna, I didn't feel 1% fear or whatever you call it because I know the next bullrun we will see a light at the end of the tunnel.

Just today I am up almost $9,000 in FIAT value, but FUCK FIAT!!!! This bull cycle I go for MAX FIAT then I'll put aside $1mil in USDT/USDC or whatever stable is good, and catch the next bear @ $40,000-45,000 per BTC and then I'll go 80-85% in BTC and set myself and my children a good fortune.

Just if $DOT reaches the previous ATH will be worth half a mil $, and the other half mil is just $NEAR and $FANTOM. This does not include $SUI or $AZERO or $MINA.

I could get 5 BTC at this moment, and it'll be worth $$120,000 \times 5 = $600,000$. It's a gamble, right, taking into account what happened with Luna, but my eggs are in a well inspected baskets, with reinforced concrete underneath them. Nowhere for them to go, at least not until the end of this bullrun.

2021 had a very very very unique set of circumstances surrounding it, circumstances that we won't see again.

I'm not convinced many coins will see their ATH ever again. I think right now is the beginning of the end for numerous layer 1's. The space became too crowded, newer tech outshines most of what was made over the last 5 years.

Crypto is a great investment. It is comparable to investing in gold.

However, it differs from gold in that it is verifiably scarce. Gold could be mined from asteroids in the future, adding thousands of tons of precious metals to the market and diluting the supply price. Crypto does not have that problem. The supply is limited mathematically.

As long as we agree it has value, it has value. And that we can agree on. Bullish on crypto.

I am not looking at them against Bitcoin, and for such a knowledge that you display, you seem to be so ignorant. You do know that in a bear market the ALTs bleed 3-4 times more than Bitcoin, right? We'll see eachother on the other side when $DOT (just an example) gets to $80 (15x from now) while $BTC only getting it to $125,000 (4.2x from now).

As I have stated multiple times, I'm going for MAX FIAT profit this bullrun and getting into 80% $BTC + 20% ALTs in the next bear.

BTW: If you were 300km away from me, I'd drive to you, just to get the satisfaction of punching you in the face for being so stubborn.

Don't be rude. Put him on your ignore list if you can't handle his posts about Sats.

I see your point but I see his too. You say you're going after MAX FIAT. How about you update us on how that's going. His point is that fiat is bullshit and you should be measuring against Bitcoin. Mainly because you should have just put all those funds into Bitcoin instead. You'd have done better, even against fiat.

He has a lot of knowledge, but at the time he is getting on my nerves as well, haha. We're not robots, sometimes we give in to our emotions. Anyway, if I invested all into BTC I'd have more right now than I have, currently sitting at $163,000 from a $235,000 total investment. It's just a big experience for me, to be honest. I'll ride this portfolio and then go ALL IN BTC the next bear, fuck them ALTs. Retirement money should be into BTC.

Realistically in my opinion, $$163,000 / $29,100 = 5.6 \text{ BTC} \times $120,000$ (my ATH prediction) = $670,000. I'll be making more in FIAT value (ONLY this bullrun), by holding the ALTs that I currently have (I'll be selling off 35% of my AZERO position and diversifying it into DOT/NEAR).

I'll have at least $1.5mil ready for the next bear run which I think BTC will go down to $40,000 levels, maybe $35,000.

$$1.5\text{mil} / $40,000 = 37.5 \text{ BTC}$

That's retirement money right there, considering that by 2030-2034 we'll be seeing 1 BTC = $1mil EASILY. So yeah, I understand your POV on playing things on the safe side, but there are a lot of things that play a key role in someone else's POV (talking about Focus imposing his POV about ALTS/SAT value). All of the bear markets so far, if BTC bleeds 80%, alts bleed 3x. It's something that's inevitable, I just don't know why he thinks his opinion is CORRECT and mine is WRONG. There is no RIGHT or WRONG here. It's a point of view, way of investment, and a different overall of seeing things.

Yes, you are 100% right. Hold BTC and STFU yes!!! But when I am deep $60k in the red, and have held for over 1 and a half years now these ALTs, converting into BTC right now is like driving in a 10 miles tunnel only to give up right before the finish line and not see a sunlight at all.

If his posts are getting to you, add to ignore. He's totally within the scope of the thread.

Also, I will keep telling you, sell it all now and go all-in to BTC. What you have, is going to perform poorly against BTC. You are gambling and speculating that at least one or two of your picks will do a 10x+. That's just a bet. Buying Bitcoin is investing. Buying alts is playing games.

Since you said you invested $235k and I initially said BTC was $17k (13.8 BTC) when you invested. If you did buy BTC, then against fiat (which is all you say you care about), you would have $402k right now. Instead you have $163k in alts.

It's going to get worse. Suggest you read this thread from your fist post and consider at what point if you listened to sound advice how much more up you would be. I can guarantee your goal of $1m+ would be more obtainable with 13.8 BTC.

This thread is hopefully an example to alt speculators. Buy Bitcoin, hold, and STFU. Everything else is gambling.

The thing is, if you believe in crypto, it should be Bitcoin you invest into. At least 80% of your holdings imho if not more. I don't have a problem doing small speculations but it's really Bitcoin that is going to continue to lead the pack.

I'll make you proud in the next bear market, but for now, it is what it is and I have to test how my diamond hands hold at least until $120k BTC. One thing I'd change is instead of adding more ALTs I'll go ahead and buy BTC from next month, and I think I can pull easily $10k per month into BTC.

why would you bet on the biggest horse? unless you are using it as another asset to diversify your portfolio with along with stocks, etfs, bonds etc when you are already rich.

doesn't make sense for anyone that isn't in the 8 figures to have 80% of their crypto exposure to btc, much better to diversify the majority of your crypto exposure into high conviction alt plays imo if you are actively trading within a bull market, i could see it being wise to have your trading stack denominated in BTC or ETH to grow those stacks through the bull market and catch slightly more upside but if the average person is say, working a $30k-50k/year job and has saved up $20-40k, does it really make sense to throw that at bitcoin?

edit: tldr, guess it totally depends on your thesis and goals.

to get rich? i don't see how holding 80% BTC is a valid strategy.

to treat it like a small part of your overall investment in markets and seek out an annual return on your investment? then it makes total sense (which tbh, 90% of people should be doing anyway) my 'gambling' would still leave me with the vast majority of my portfolio because like i said, its high conviction bets that are taken with clear and concise rules and exit strategies.. vs... dcaing $60k... $50k.... $40k... $30k.... $20k...

I can see you are a BTC maxi, but do you seriously think that someone with a sub 10m stack that is trying to squeeze opportunity out of a risk-on casino would be better off 80% btc, than... say picking good entries in a bear market on alts that have a high probability of at the very least doing a 5x within a bull market before rotating into fresh trends?

Just don't need to take the bait of a silly debate. You believe investing is "educated gambling". It's not.

Quote:True, investing and gambling both involve risk and choice—specifically, the risk of capital with hopes of future profit. But gambling is typically a short-lived activity, while equities investing can last a lifetime. Also, there is a negative expected return to gamblers, on average and over the long run. On the other hand, investing in the stock market typically carries with it a positive expected return on average over the long run.

And....

Quote:In contrast, the stock market constantly appreciates over the long term. This doesn't mean that a gambler will never hit the jackpot, and it also doesn't mean that a stock investor will always enjoy a positive return. It is simply that over time, if you keep playing, the odds will be in your favor as an investor and not in your favor as a gambler.

Believe whatever the fuck you want but investing in Bitcoin is going to have an expected positive return in the long-run.

btc traded -50%+ from this, obviously no way it hits $250k this year (or maybe it does, as again.. no one knows the future ie: gambling), hard to see the difference between investing in btc at $60k, targeting 250k and investing in say.. $SOL at $15-20 targeting $60-80. if your risk is defined it shouldn't matter anyway thanks for the convo, will leave it here; enjoy your evening

While I agree with your general sentiment that having a diversified mix of shit during a bullrun will be much better than holding BTC, my general comment would be that no one can predict when a bullrun is (the basis of your argument here). If you mistime it, you'll take an additional X% of loss on-top of the BTC-denominated losses and end up underperforming. I think you guys are arguing BTC as a short-term vs. BTC as a long-term, as well as bull vs. bear, so the arguments don't really carry over.

Would also add that the relative amount of capital it takes to move these large caps (as well as their unique differentiating factors) compared to buying various shitcoins. It's the whole reason why there's a spectrum of investors in the traditional markets than span from angel investors to public market indexers, crypto is no different.

Agreed that there is a lot of misunderstanding about long-term investing vs short-term trading. I'm fairly sure the days of 10x in a few months is gone. Those times have come and went. It's not going to return.

There isn't anyone that's not heard of Bitcoin. An ETF for Bitcoin is going to change the market because institutional investors are going to potentially put trillions into it. That is NOT imho going to bleed into the alts market. If anything it's going to create a clear separation and doom the alts into the pit of hell that most of them belong. Alts will fight for utility while BTC is going to reign supreme as SoV.

The Smart-Contract space hasn't been settled yet, clearly ETH is the leader but I don't think it will win mainly because of TPS and high fees.

There is clarity about Bitcoin that just isn't there for the rest of the market.

I think the 10x return trades will come back - just in different forms. 2017 was ICOs, 2021 was shitcoins, the next one will be gated KYC-esque drops (not saying I'm a proponent of it, just where I see the market is moving).

So like if after Maddoff scam was exposed and you still invested into his fund, you wouldn't consider that tragic?

You admit you're "knee deep" which is the reason you should not DCA. Which is where the tragedy part comes into play.

Since you started this thread the investment hasn't gone well for you. That's not my fault or anyone replying. That's on you. The fix is simple. Sell what you have, invest into BTC. Selling it all and going 100% into DOT is going to end in disaster.

So you're biggest monetary fiat loss is DOT and that's what you're going to put more money into? Do I have that right?

btw, I'm not against DOT, seems like a reasonable chain with potential. But surely being down 91% from the ATH means that it's had its moment.

Each bull run has pumps which are the "next big thing". And all the previous pumps from the last bull do almost nothing. So basically if a coin already pumped in a bull run, it's not going to pump again. The reason for that is simple. Mentally people want something new, a promise of potential that no one else has seen. They want that 100x return and try to get into something brand new.

Something like A0 or even Radix imho are more likely to pump.

Each bull run has pumps which are the "next big thing". And all the previous pumps from the last bull do almost nothing. So basically if a coin already pumped in a bull run, it's not going to pump again. The reason for that is simple. Mentally people want something new, a promise of potential that no one else has seen. Yeah, DOT is a very good chain and I think deserves more marketcap than Binance's centralized shit BNB. A lot of action on the parachains lately as well. I am holding AZERO and will probably just liquidate 35-40% of my holdings there.

What would you say determines the survivability of a coin? For example, doge has been a top 10 cryptocurrency for the last decade. It's not trying to solve any groundbreaking technology like DOT it's literally just a meme coin - yet it survives every bear/bull market to date and will likely continue to do so for many years to come.

If azero or xrd is able to succeed in the next bull market, I believe everyone here who even invested a little would be very rich lol but the odds of that happening are much lower than DOT imo edit: Also going all in on DOT is crazy but I pray he makes it out lol

There are many ways to determine survivability, but honestly its also all speculation because what has made one coin thrive, has not worked for others.. I think it comes with large corporate backings, or like you say 'doge coin' This coin survives because of Reddit, and not only that actually retarded people, I wish you knew how many people have asked me about doge when speaking or overhearing crypto conversations, people are just simply unaware of crypto functionality and follow the masses.

Could be a lot of reasons why a coin survives. For Doge it's simple, Elon Musk. If he didn't love talking about the meme coin for his own shits and giggles, fairly sure Doge would be worth 1/10th of its current value. Musk has a huge reach.

Quote:If azero or xrd is able to succeed in the next bull market, I believe everyone here who even invested a little would be very rich lol but the odds of that happening are much lower than DOT imo

Marketing equals reach. Can you survive without marketing, yes, it's possible...but with such a crowded field, unless the alt coin is getting a lot of attention from the market it will die. Example is Divi. It's a decent product, decent mission, but no reach, it's just one alt-coin like any other to most people.

Quote:It's funny how most of you talk like you've never been in minus on your portfolio in a BEAR MARKET.

Actually many of us speaking to you are doing so from going through 2 full cycles. Before you were even a member, we were talking crypto. We're attempting to pass on wisdom from hard-lessons learned through our own loses.

I bet you the majority of people consider Bitcoin-Maxi's are actually just people stung too many times by speculative alts. I got alts, I made some money, overall though I have lost money because of greed. You buy an alt at $1 and if it hits $3 you think it can hit $5 or $10. Then one day it's 10 cents and you realize you're a fool for not selling but also for buying it in the first place. If I just bought Bitcoin, held, and STFU...I'd be worth millions right now.

Holding Bitcoin is so important. You literally have the chance to put 3-4 whole Bitcoins in your wallet. And yeah, one of these alts you have might spike. But guess what, on any long-term scale, it will be Bitcoin that performs the best. I have zero doubt on that. People think Bitcoin can't 100x from $30k. But it can and it will.

You know? Back in 2020 I got paid in Bitcoin for something I did (undisclosed) and I had 12.8 BTC in the wallet... Sold between $9000 and $11500 per BTC August 2020... I didn't know what FIAT means, I thought you're buying a car from the Fiat dealership with Bitcoin and I was amazed that they accepted Bitcoin... Only to find that Fiat were the cash called (I'm European, so it figures lol).

$12.8 \text{ BTC} \times $60,000 \text{ (not the top of $69,000)} = $768,000.$

You know what I did with the $125,000 I cashed out? Bought a car for $42,000, paid $20,000 in debts and gambled away half of it, while I spent the rest on life... This is one of my biggest mistakes, but actually when you lack the knowledge you can't blame yourself for not taking the appropriate action. That's like blaming yourself for not knowing the lotto numbers beforehand.

Moral of the story, investing and cutting short even average life-style let alone expensive one just for a few years will make a big impact for the rest of my life. So yeah, I enjoy being $100,000 in debt in the bank, I drive my VW Golf 2009 and I just wanna get injected with some sort of a drug and wake up Jan 2025.

tbf if you look at overall environment and think longterm... one of the best performing investments is within memes are they completely useless? yes. is it one of the stronger bull cases for crypto? yes. everyone want's to get rich, everyone is chronically online and loves memes. it only makes sense they flood to the casino (crypto), your job is to just identify the meme coins they actually take to. definitely hard and i only see very specific niche onchain traders thriving within that, but it's definitely somewhere im investing into for the coming years.

I think as soon as GME/AMC took off, it was confirmation that it's the start of one of the main draws for the average person to start investing.

crypto hasn't innovated in so long, market is stale. DeFi is a joke in its current state. crypto has barely built anything that has real world use cases outside of the basic on chain transactions

3 of the top 10~ last cycle top were shitcoins, majority of the biggest winners that sucked liquidity out of the market when they were on their runs were memecoins i'd never put my entire 'house' (portfolio?) into a single coin, unless i have a sub 5 figure net worth and im looking to degen, but i would (and am) absolutely allocating portions of my net worth to meme coins and sewer diving onchain. (think recent erc pepe, hpos10i, bald) some of the best traders i've seen take a few trades a year, and are from studying and catching meme trends, and i think the success and volume that got pumped into nft's backs that up.

anyway, im not saying you should allocate your entire portfolio to meme coins... obviously not. but i do think if you aren't paying attention and looking to buy some that stand out from the crowd, then you are just hurting yourself

I'm not saying there's no money to be made in these coins, actually i agree and i know the volatility provides a good window for positive margins, but they also require a lot of attention to be cautious, there's things that are slowly being worked on because functionality does take time where a coin with no purpose doesn't, I just don't like the idea of promoting said coins because people are dumb, they'll see the margins throw money they can't afford to lose on it and go broke, i've seen it happen so many times. I don't see longevity in them because without people hyping them (elon, reddit) the market WILL die and at a fast rate, with other coins (top 10s) there's somewhat of a safety net in terms of when you can sell out to secure minimum loss.

But in the end investing is at best educational gambling and you should do endless research before putting money into anything, but as i said people just aren't that smart.

love crypto and i use it a ton (just for the basic p2p transactions and such) i'd love if the in 20 years time there is some real things built in crypto, but at the moment its just "what can we copy/paste, put a new marketing angle on to make 9 figures as founders/vc's") honestly, i think the best thing for crypto would be a period where 'cycles' don't play out and we spend 10 years in the pits of hell dead in the water where people actually start to build.

im half and half with you on the ethical means behind memecoins, because 1. i'd never tell people how to invest but on the other hand i just look at the market as a pvp game, majority lose.. doesn't matter if its safemoon or bitcoin, only think i'd give for those degenerate memecoins is there is no leverage, but still people oversize in spot so doesn't really matter where they play, most will get rekt

Well that's the thing.

First wave was pure crypto (Bitcoin, Litecoin, Doge, and Monero). It was all about blockchain.

Second wave was smart contracts with Ethereum.

Third wave was NFT's and DeFi (because of Smart Contracts) and basically has been a failure. Doesn't meant it's bad concept, just that it's not taken yet. DeFi imho is going to be huge, so will NFTs. But likely in ways we can't yet forsee.

Being a good investor isn't about starting with a lot of money, it's about ending with more money than you started with. You can always continue going back further if you want to see my other gains-

You might be able to blame one win on luck, but you have to attribute two wins to skill. When PR1V473 liquidated his Bitcoins in August 2020, I bought them:
if you were as good of a trader/investor as you think you are then you'd naturally be playing with higher size than you are.

he got paid for a business deal in BTC, makes total sense to cashout to fiat if its not part of your investment portfolio and it was a business transaction, the payment method was just BTC.

also congrats, but if you are such a good trader and bought btc in 2020 why are you still trading with sub 4 figure P&L i dont really care for your P&L, trading profitability; because i'm not hyper focused on other peoples portfolios like you, but instead of regularly updating someone on their portfolio performance; worry about your own lol

I have not read more than 2-3 posts on Page 13 and nothing else, but I will say that a "good trader" should be evaluated by % gains, not $$ gains. You can be the world's best trader, but have an addiction and never have enough cash to be rich. You can be the worst trader in the world and become a billionaire if you have enough funds to "get lucky once".

It's very difficult to say that a USD amount must be high in order for a trader to be good. I spent 2020-2021 basically paying rent, going on trips, etc with my profits. Could I have made a lot more if I re-invested? Yes. Does it make me a bad trader because I didn't re-invest my profits? Maybe, depending on how you look at it. %-wise, I kicked ass. Numbers wise, I didn't impress anyone that year, but if you tallied up all my airbnb rentals & other purchases, you'd understand.

As an example, I started another mini portfolio almost 2 years ago. It started at around $1,000 and now is worth $3200. Am I a bad trader because my P&L is in the 4 digits? No, I literally have over 300% of my initial investment & the usual returns for stock market is anywhere 5-10% on average. So, %-wise I kicked ass, numbers wise I did not. Before anyone decides to rob me, it's in a trust-style account with very specific rules for buy/sell action so I couldn't cash it out for you if I tried

And regarding my portfolio, I'm investing what I can expect to lose. Yes, I took a mortgage on my apartment, but so what? I got the means to pay it back without selling the crypto so it's another thing. Am I taking a gambling approach? Yes. Will it pay off? We'll see.

this is wrong, you can be a good trader with a small amount of money for sure; it can take time to grow an account when conditions aren't suitable... but you will grow your account pretty damn fast if you are a good trader, you aren't going to be sitting with a small portfolio for years.

"You can be the world's best trader, but have an addiction and never have enough cash to be rich. You can be the worst trader in the world and become a billionaire if you have enough funds to "get lucky once"."

don't completely agree with this, and besides that is the 0.01% of traders that are gifted at trading but have large risk appetites. the worst trader in the world will never become a billionaire (they'd have to already be one) just because they have a lot of funds.

"It's very difficult to say that a USD amount must be high in order for a trader to be good. I spent 2020-2021 basically paying rent, going on trips, etc with my profits. you aren't taking trading seriously, you are not a hobbyist imo; a trader doesn't pull money from their trading stack to use to pay for expenses. you were just investing. anyone can be profitable over a short time period (not taking away from your success, congrats on being profitable a year; its better than 99% of people)

"As an example, I started another mini portfolio almost 2 years ago. It started at around $1,000 and now is worth $3200. Am I a bad trader because my P&L is in the 4 digits? it completely depends on your trading style, i think to be called a profitable trader you need to hit some criteria (such as X amount of trades a year, and 2-3 years of profitability trading atleast like 10 months of the year). if you are a profitable trader $1000 --> $3200 in 2 years would be pretty bad imo, you'd be looking to run it up faster due to the account size and the freedom of moving in and out of positions without effecting the market.

I will say though, i think you did great, your job is to outperform the market as a trader; if you are investing/taking high time frame swings on a month/weekly time frame then you did well. I'd say judging traders you have to take in so many factors, from their trading style; to what they are trading, the market conditions and their portfolio size. i think if you are judging two people within the same bracket (3,4,5,6,7,8,9 figures) then you'd base it off of %, but you can't compare an 8 figure trader and a 5 figure trader based on % gain.

tldr: agree with you in some situations

Omniscient - August 23, 2023, 12:46 pm

Trading and investing are not the same thing. OP is actually attempting to do long-term investing using short-term markets. Most people doing alt trading successfully are likely doing dozens or even hundreds of trades per day. Most people investing into Bitcoin simply buy and hold.

I know it's semantics but imho it's an important distinguishing characteristic. I believe too many people are confused about trading and investing. And they lose money when they mix them up.

It's like confusing a whore and a wife. Sure they're both woman you screw but they are not the same thing and some men get confused and treat their wives like a whore and even vise-versa.

You want a quickie, get a whore, get in and out fast. That's trading.

You want a wife, then it's a long-term commitment. That's investing.

You raise a lot of fantastic points Vitali, but ultimately any trader that has 100% profits in only 1 portfolio, like crypto, isn't really diversifying enough. One can argue that the best trader sold 100% of their crypto at ATH & now only invests a small amount and recently went up 50%++ on tech stocks over last year. So, it's hard to say, but I really only speak in general, not in this specific case. A few grand in 1 risky asset type like crypto is fine, 95% of the world and many of the worlds millionaires and billionaires have $0 in crypto.

Don't get me wrong, I develop web3 and crypto / defi software every single day, and I invest too. However, I invest more off crypto, and I think it's okay to show % gains. Now, if you're accusing OP of essentially hiding losses then okay, fair enough. I'm speaking purely about an honest low budget portfolio with great % returns being an indicator of a good trader in principle. In practice, of course a good trader should have more money, especially over time. I guess I'm just saying that if it's a case of taking profits and not reinvesting into crypto then that's one reason a good trader's specific crypto earnings could be low 4 digits while still being respectable.

- AZERO (28,000 $AZERO @ $1.32 AVG)
- POLKADOT (2,962 $DOT @ $14.50 AVG)
- POLYGON (3,234 $MATIC @ $0.77 AVG)

- RADIX (22,236 $XRD @ $0.13 AVG))
- ENJIN (1,799 $ENJIN @ $0.28 AVG)
- XX NETWORK (5,124 $XX @ $0.49 AVG)

My plan on where to invest the $35,000 are: (divided into 3 categories)

The TOP crypto category that consists of 52%:

- 25% POLKADOT ($7,500 @ Price Target Of $4,75)
- 12% POLYGON ($3,600 @ Price Target Of $0,50)
- 15% NEAR ($4,500 @ Price Target Of $1,20)

The RISKY crypto category that consists of 28%:

- 9% ALEPH ZERO ($2,700 @ Price Target Of $0,65)
- 7% FANTOM ($2,100 @ Price Target Of $0,18)
- 5% ENJIN ($1,500 @ Price Target Of $0,20)
- 7% THETA ($2,100 @ Price Target Of $0,65)

The SUPER-RISKY crypto category that consists of 20%:

- 5% ERGO ($1,500 @ Price Target Of $1,10)
- 5% MINA ($1,500 @ Price Target Of $0,25)
- 5% MOONBEAM ($1,500 @ Price Target Of $0,25)
- 5% KADENA ($1,500 @ Price Target Of $0,75)

Now I want to hear the forum's opinion on my portfolio.

What am I missing?

Which coin I should remove (Why?)?

Which coin I should absolutely have(Why?)?

So far, all these sh*tcoins are dying compared to BTC. if you only converted these funds for sats, you would be way better. I believe that Bitcoin will always outperform every sh*tcoin. Let's see how things are gonna play out.

An 8x (800% gain) in one year seems to be 2017 thinking when the markets were newer to most people. What's going to be the driver of 8x returns in the next year? Why would DOT grow 8x over a more stable and known crypto like Bitcoin? Bitcoin has that ETF coming eventually, should be the positive news and influx of investment capital to push the price upwards.

Is there something going in with DOT over the next year to deliver an 800% return?

I agree with you on this. Looking at how the market is going right now it looks like the market will take a huge dip in 2024.

What's going to be the driver of 8x returns in the next year? Why would DOT grow 8x over a more stable and known crypto like Bitcoin? Bitcoin has that ETF coming eventually, should be the positive news and influx of investment capital to push the price upwards.

Is there something going in with DOT over the next year to deliver an 800% return? Yeah, while BTC/ETH do a new ATH, DOT will just simply won't even touch half of the previous ATH? Seems a bit unrealistic to me, but we'll see. I put my money where my mouth is, and we'll see how things work out.

But that's exactly what happened in the last Bull Run to older chains. Mainly the newest chains were pumped. ETH has a much higher chance of pumping imho than DOT.

But again, I asked you what's happening with DOT in the next year to be the reason for an 8x? Is there some chain update, a new partnership, or anything going on that would give it a 800% return?

Just asking you, why is DOT going to 8x? Why would it?

For some reason, I get a lot of TRON payments. I do not know why. I find it clumsy dealing in TRC-20's. But it seems to have more of a following than DOT or other Smart Contract chains.

Funny that by Tron is cap #11 and DOT is #13 but that difference is 60% higher market cap for TRX.

I got nothing against DOT either. I have never used it, never been asked to take a DOT payment.

For instance, DOT has a very active and big developer count, alongside with the Parachains I think it gives a great concept about interoperability between chains.

Agreed. You're making a HUGE gamble with a portfolio like this. Many altcoins die out never to see ATH again. I think betting even 2/3 reach ATH is, well, a reach. Previous ATH's is not an indicator of any future performance.

My crypto portfolio is entirely ETH, personally. I think it is much more likely to not only hit ATH again, but surpass it. Hoping for 8-10k. I will take a look into some of these alts and might start investing into some if I can start bringing in more money. Mostly been playing with Options on the NYSE. I think your Top 3 are the best bets, but also funny your top 3 is still not Bitcoin, Ethereum, or Litecoin lol.

Also, if memory serves me right, "alt season" started after Bitcoin boomed, so you would be better off all in on bitcoin and then DCA'ing out as it hits ATH's and then putting your profit into potential alt's.

That's exactly what happened when BTC was at $67k and alts from the previous pump were down huge percentages. It's not only logical, it's historical.

Quote:Have you noticed that Bitcoin pumping each cycle does not resurrect the altcoins that existed during the previous cycle?

Correct, after being though multiple cycles based on Bitcoin Halvenings, every previous cycle set of alts were dead. The exceptions were Blue Chip Legacy like Ethereum, Litecoin, and even Doge. A huge portion of previous pumping alts were worthless.

Finally found my thread from August where I actually discussed this.

It doesn't have to be a shitcoin pump and dump to fail. It can be innovative and have active developers too. The space is full of decent blockchains which will never make it simply because there is only so much investment capital and utility for blockchains.

<https://www.coingecko.com/en/categories/dot-ecosystem>

SUI-3183372 - October 12, 2023, 2:53 pm

DOT and some of the parachains in the ecosystem have historically offered some of the highest returns for staking across the entire market. This was a huge draw during the height of the last run. However, this degree of inflation has definitely contributed to how harshly prices have fallen across Polkadot and many of its parachains, and will make retracing that ground increasingly more difficult.

most alts peaked around the same time as bitcoin iirc, few of them in the summer that ran insane (like doge/shib/etc) but most top alts topped around late september/november the same as bitcoin and even the previous cycles dinosaur coins, went and check a few from coinmarketcap 2017 top

btc 1700%
ada 17000%
ltc 1800%

dash 1400%
xmr 2000%
eos 980% xlm 3000% trx 2700% etc 5100%

you can still make money from last cycle coins, especially early on in the (or mid/late, when people are rotating/pumping shit if you play it well), of course i think newer coins will always perform better, but i don't see the bad in still investing in older alt coins, if bitcoin goes to $2+ trillion dollars, the amount of money flowing around the entire ecosystem will definitely send altcoins crazy, now dinosaur coins might not reach new all time highs (if there isn't a narrative) but you can still make a higher % from them than btc (of course added risk)

side note: i rarely look at things from the 'tech narrative' anymore, i'll let it play into some longterm spot investments but at the end of the day if money is flowing into the market i am looking for trades on whatever looks appealing, im not an emotionally attached eth/btc/altcoin maxi. im actually currently bearish crypto due to a whole range of things, bullish ponzi casino that provides value to extract from it that is the blockchain

Yeah Vitaly that's my point exactly. Focus is too much of a Bitcoin maxi to understand that this bullrun some people including myself go for max fiat profits, so that in the next bear I can set my life up for good with a 80% Bitcoin portfolio. Somehow yet he is still calculating DOT/SATS and giving me math with how DOT is badly performing against BTC. Well ofcourse DOT will perform bad against BTC, it's a fuc*ing ALT coin, they bleed to death on the way down. Crypto investment 101.

I watched DOT go from $4 to $55 last cycle, and I watched it go from $55 to $3.65 this bear market. What's the catcher for me, financially speaking not looking at the tech?

In the time when DOT came out, from 8th of October until the very TOP of the bull cycle, DOT never (excluding a few days) came out of the TOP 10 coins (excluding stable coins), if this doesn't give you a sense that there is a strong market value in DOT even with the big inflation they have, still the money kept flowing it. If DOT dropped to 25-30th spot, then things would be different in my portfolio at this point.

My question to Focus Broken is this:

If BTC does a 5x from this moment which is, $$26,800 \times 5 = $134,000$.

If ETH does a 7x from this moment which is, $$1,550 \times 7 = $10,850$.

Will DOT not do 7x as well to beat BTC's X which is, $$3.70 \times 7 = $26$?

You are telling me that a crypto project that has a big ecosystem, good number of developers active (Omni's point is right, I can't define BIG number of developers), has NOT BEEN OUT of the TOP 10 list for over 3 years and counting, will not EVEN REACH half of it's previous ATH just to beat Bitcoin's gains for this bullrun?

If you think that what I said above will happen, you my friend, are very very delusional.

What's the TOP-TOP for me is BTC hitting $140,000 and ETH hitting $12,000, in both scenarios they will make at least 2x (BTC) and 2.6x (ETH) from their previous ATH while both having ENORMOUS MARKETCAPS in comparison to DOT's marketcap which is currently only at $5 billion.

Yeah, investing in BTC (blue chip) and sometimes ETH is more safe, but I am not with this narrative in life. If you want safe, you can go and invest in normal stocks or real estate. I am here trying to make generational wealth for this bullcycle, so that I can retire even my kids and set them up for life.

Just to RE-CAP what Focus and other people are saying:

YES, Bitcoin will make a new ATH that is 2x from previous ATH and will put it at $140,000 (approx)
YES, Ethereum will make a new ATH that is 2.6x from previous ATH and will put it at $12,000 (approx)
BUT NO, Polkadot will NOT EVEN REACH the previous ATH of $55, let alone make a new one, BECAUSE OF NO VALID REASON.

I will laugh and I will reply to this thread the moment DOT reaches $35 and that will put it at 9.5x and still make BETTER FIAT gains than your blue chips. But hey, DOT is a very risky investment... Everyone views risk and accepts it and processes it with a different POV of things.

exactly this, definitely need to make sure the chart looks good etc but if you start a cycle buying the previous cycles coins that have good charts and are looking to break out of their time/price based capitulation ranges then you COULD make more than you would with BTC, which is all i was trying to say lmao

That's your bet in a nutshell. You think DOT is going to match or even beat the market against Blue Chips like ETH or BTC. I really hope it does it for you. But I don't share in your optimism and I fully believe you'll be lucky to get to 25% of what BTC returns.

PR1V473 - October 15, 2023, 2:16 am

Worst case scenario $DOT goes from $3.76 (price in the moment I am replying) to at least $12-13 and falls off from being a TOP10 coin for the past 3 years to 50th+ place, still would make me a 4x return. But let's make a bet of $500 Omniscient that $DOT will get to $9 faster than $BTC reaching $45,000, or in approximate dates, before 15th of March.

Yeah, I have a diversification in my portfolio but $DOT is my biggest holding of more than 60%. I do believe the project, and everything around it, and for that reason it takes more than half of my portfolio.

You are a Bitcoin guy, don't get me wrong, I am a Bitcoin guy as well, but I have that gambling spirit in me as well that's why this bull run I aim for MAX FIAT value, so that the next bear market I can buy 80% if not more into $BTC and I can retire myself.

Fast math: Saving $850,000 USDT/USDC or whatever, for the next bear market which I think $BTC will reach $40,000 and maybe even the lowest point will be $35,000, that gets me 21 $BTC (bought @ $40,000). With 21 $BTC I can say that I have made it, and will be enough to set my kids up for good, and will be some leftovers for their kids too.

Not so big compared to Focus Broken's knowledge, but at least I put my money where my mouth is.

post your P&L on that 7 month trade, let's see if if you've climbed out of the $200 P&L club

if you are still holding that trade with that amount of contracts after 7 months, you'd roughly be up like $200 or something LMFAO, what is this sizing and ego ratio.... you made a few hundred bucks in 7 months if you held it that long, and the fact you TP'd 10 contracts (literal pennies) minutes after i'm gonna guess you didn't even do that

It says "DAMNNNNNNNNNNN NICE CALL, YOU SHORTED THE TOP!"

And what's your profit on that, in DOLLARS? Don't even answer that, everyone can do Inspect Element or Photoshop nowadays.

The fact that I have half of your knowledge but twice the size of your balls, and I have a bigger portfolio than yours by a 3x or 4x the size, makes you do math on my losses so that you can somehow feel important by the crowd.

Yeah, cope harder.
