

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: what else did you print?

X-LIT - December 12, 2022, 4:35 pm

for the most part, whether as a learner of pro. in programming, we would come upon statements such as "Hello World" especially when displaying or outputting a message.

it's common practice with programming textbooks and tutorial examples. bla bla bla

Code print("Hello World"). but here's my actual question; did you REALLY? at some point while coding displayed Hello World lol? cos you're a genius if you were printing something else with all that mostly everywhere.

Faith Connors - December 12, 2022, 5:16 pm

jesse what the fuck are you talking about wtfpop - December 12, 2022, 7:46 pm

I usually just do "hello" because it's easier and faster to type.

X-LIT - December 13, 2022, 2:17 am

(Dec 12, 2022 06:16 PM)Faith Connors Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) jesse what the fuck are you talking about my apologies. its surely weird how that came off but hey, just something i thought was funny once you begin learning to code) i know i printed stuff such as 'working, x,y ab' variables - just as the user @Yani mentioned.

Hackers - December 13, 2022, 5:33 am

Yeah, I started with those examples, but a lot of times would just have the word "hello" or I would put something random in.