Thread: Is Keurig superior coffee?

Recently tried coffee from a Keurig coffee maker and I have to say the coffee tastes incredible. No milk, or sugar... What are your coffee habits and experiences like?

I have a ninja coffee maker I got for my birthday awhile back, and the pods are just so convenient to pop one in. I like the Kirkland brand ones the best, but across the board they're just so much more expensive than regular ground. So I've been using a filter adapter and buying the cheap grinds more lately.

My wife switched to Nespresso and won't go back.

No sugar? Dog those cups already have the sugar added to them depending on what you're brewing.

I love it for what it is, I don't drink hot drinks often as I overheat in like one sip, but I'll drink a few cups here and there out of the office one whenever someone grabs a limited edition box.

I had multiple Keurig's over the years and they were great! Recently, I grabbed a Nespresso and I must say it's a nice upgrade, the only downside is the expensive pods.

So easy to make.

I wake up and press 2 buttons and have coffee in 20 seconds.

Yeah, it's great. I'll usually have a shot of espresso, but after 2-3 hours, those sugar free/low carb monster energy drinks. After that the only thing I'll have is water and tea.

Mostly little difference in my opinion. I would rather cheap coffee grounds.
