Thread: Member nominations.

Pentatonix - December 31, 2022, 5:19 pm

Hey guys,

With this group being invite only, I would like to make this an ongoing thread for member recommendations. I will eventually make a recruitment thread, but for now, I would like this to be member-to-member invitations only.

Let me know your recommendations and why below.

Thanks.

I personally think you need to wait for the rebrand to start nominating members, otherwise it may not have the same meaning.

But either way I love this idea, I've always been on the side of having the community vote on things instead of a 1 person decision. Even if you have 2-3 people making decisions like this it's still better overall to have a discussion on why you think this member should be added for example.

Cap is such a genuine person, I'll throw his hat in the ring.

Agreed with this and Cap. Once you have the majority of things set up and rebranded then we can nominate members, but for now I would just say members who can help with rebrand and getting the group name out there would be more than fine.

I'd definitely suggest pms as he is a writer and a musician and was working on a group idea similar to this.

I hope he's fine with someone else snagging the niche.

He's welcome to create another if he wishes.

?nxy could fit in from an artistic stand point. He's got quite the personality and ik it rubs some people the wrong way, but he's a video editor and would probably be one of the few who'd actually keep that section alive at this point.

Viper also said he wished my then 4 month old son would get raped in the ass by a black dude and that he'd die of cancer.

Fuck Viper.

I don't like him, he wasn't a consideration anyhow. No worries.

Nostre has always been a man of the community.

He just spent time making a thread about gambling addiction, prior staff, good dude.

I've also said it before, but Cap as well.

This is an arts group. What value in that respect do they add? I can add dozens of high quality members to the group, but if they aren't aligned with our propose, we become a useless lounge group like 18/20 of the other groups.

In the same aspect what do I really bring to the group?

Besides attempting to be HQ, which I don't claim to be; and medical things, what do I have?

Debating. Guides. Discussion topics. If you have no intention on doing this, then there's your sign.

I've dropped tons of guides, just seeing where we're drawing the line as a group.

I nominate skull

There is no singular person that I feel would be more deserving. A good friend, a very generous human being and absolutely delightful to have around. Very talented and humble. Not sure about whether or not they are artsy, but they carry knowledge that could be used for any projects or ideas the group may have.

I also nominate [mention=5051324] because he's a bro and one of my favorite people to socialize with here. That is my bias.

I do like Skull, I feel that he would be a good addition to the group; however, I'm still not sure if diluting the group with members who aren't able to participate in our purpose is going to benefit the group. If he's able to post thorough discussion posts in a debating scenario, sure. If he's able to work with the HF News, sure. But I can't just add every person that I like into the group. It defeats the purpose of the group. There's Coined, Pink LSZ, and countless other groups that can accept everyone just because they're not a total shitbag.

Same thing for Nintendo 64. I'm not so sure what purpose he would serve.

skull is easily the most loyal and contributing member on this forum to this very day, hands down. He's developed things for every group he has been in. I handpicked him for Warriors and a leadership role because he's a respectful, hardworking and very intelligent person.

I'll admit N64 is a friend, that's why I threw his name out there, but as far as being a contributing force for the forum, I don't know of a single member matching that description more than skull.

Totally unrelated post, how do I unnominate someone from the group? Asking for a friend.

Welcome Cooligan lmao, very excited to see you around these parts.
