Thread: Someone I can DM about a Python/Programming related question?

SIM-3221368 - January 28, 2023, 4:23 pm

So....I have a really really dumb question I need to ask related to Python and just programming in general. I'm rather too embarrassed to post it here.

how will you become god-tier developer if you dont channel the anger and disgust from the condescending tones of internet randoms boosting their egos :^D

but i studied python for about a semester in uni. im by no means an expert, but im familiar with some of the standard features at least

He would've been able to get help just as quick if he actually posted the question instead of solicited someone to PM.

One of the most excellent servers for programming, and I have learned a lot of things from there. Truly a gem.

You can DM me as well

Then you can just look it up on Google or StackOverflow.

In 90% of the cases, someone else must have asked that question already and you'll just get your answer there.

Else just post your question on StackOverflow and people will answer you.

You can also post your question here, in starting everyone asks these starter questions then with time you get the experience and become better at coding.

Don't be embarrassed about it.
