I've skimmed through many ideas of how people are making money, starting a smma business, an OnlyFans agency, e-whoring but none of these have even remotely worked, Any easy ideas or partnerships?

How do you start something like that and how much money do you need to start?

Also do you think its possible to start a web dev agency by just hiring freelancers?

Do something that scales. Example cost of making remains same or less but you can multiple the sales. SaaS is a good field to look into.

You just need a computer with a keyboard and internet access. That's it. If you want to out source the work and hire others to do it, that's certainly possible. Not sure you'll get very good results without having some personal experience with the development, but hey, lots of company execs have no idea how their companies run.

This is definitely very good advice. I currently am a dev but still looking to outsource work and have someone create me websites. It will always be in demand and if you are diligent you can easily learn how to create them. There are so many tools online and free info.
