Thread: [\[#1\]\[Official Group\] Olympians - LEADERSHIP RECRUITMENT \[Best Color\]](#)

Neil - April 4, 2023, 11:13 am

Hello, HF community.

As the new owner of Olympians, I'm currently holding recruitment for leadership positions.

In terms of what type of leaders I'm looking for and what type of group I'm willing to create, It'll be more of a jack-of-all-trades group.

I want multiple sectors, i.e

1. Coding / AI sector. I would like to bring a leader for this section. The leader must be active, good at coding/what they do (With proof to back it up), and must be creative.

WHAT DO I MEAN BY CREATIVE?

In order to keep the group/forum activity alive, the leader must be able to lead a group of coders/ai techs who are interested in learning as well as teaching others. The Coding sector will be filled with a group of individuals who want to excel at coding, learn and teach new tips and tricks, and are willing to come up with ideas on keeping the community engaged. I'm thinking more towards the line of creating monthly/quarterly tasks/competitions to be completed (Which would be created/discussed by the group/sector leaders) which would result ultimately in a reward for the user who completes it.

2. Finance/business

Everyone loves making money, regardless of what sector you're in. This sector will be targeting users who are interested in the finance aspect of life.

Stocks, Bonds, Crypto, Real Estate, marketing, anything and everything to do with leveling up in the finance/business world. I want to include real-life scenarios and examples of job opportunities people can get, help with certain courses or classes that can be taken to further one's career, etc.

3. Music, Art, Graphics, Lounging.

Even though everyone loves being serious and working hard 24/7, everyone needs some stress-free time.

This sector will be more towards the life balance one is working on achieving. I'd probably lead this sector since I need something to do as well, but it will be a sector that's free for all to relax, talk about their lives, what's going on with them, things they can improve and work on, etc.

Think more along the lines of therapy and being therapeutic towards one another.

4. Gaming, ESports, etc.

A sector that focuses towards gaming, gaming tips/tricks, advice, even talking about things like owning an esports team.

I'm not saying everyone has to get along, there won't be arguments & it'll be a success from day 1, but if everyone treats it as a community they would want to be a part of and actually work together to help everyone else succeed, the group activity & hf activity could definitely increase.

At the end of the day, people want things that benefit mainly them and themselves. If this group can end up showing that, we can get shit done.

Thank you, and taking apps for the leadership roles for the sectors listed above.

No specific application process, just tell me a little bit about yourself & what you're good at, and what you can bring to the group.

Good luck taking your group in this direction. It will take lots of work and motivation to achieve. Unfortunately, the community isn't like it used to be. Subforums are usually dead asf with little to no participation. I was giving away over $1k of awards and prizes and even then only the same 10-12 people were doing each event.

For me, at least, the real value is knowledge. Having and being able to provide knowledge that others may not know or would want to learn could bring more motivation and activity as a whole.

I agree, but more so what I was meaning is that the community base that's willing to take the time to teach and learn is mostly gone. There aren't as many guides and community information being posted as there once was. Members don't put in the effort they used to.

I wish you the best of luck in this endeavor. My group is doing fairly well so far, but it takes a lot to keep it going. Most people just want the userbar/color, they could care less about the group. This is the dilemma for all groups in 2023.

Do you plan on rebranding the group or are you leaving it as it is?

I'll have to see in terms of rebranding. Don't have an idea for a name/user bar yet, so I'll keep it as is, for now.

Inactivity / not trying would lead to a user being kicked from the group. If they care about the user bar or color enough, they can definitely put in the work to keep it.

I get where you're coming from 100%, though. I'm sure there are users who are still dedicated and willing to learn/teach, and hopefully, after a slower start, we can get things rolling and create a name for ourselves.

I feel like it's time to start involving newer members into groups and building off of that. When I was new, getting into a group really helped sparked my interest in the community and wanted to contribute more.

Don't get me wrong, there are plenty of excellent older members that still contribute, but if we want the newer members to stay and eventually become just like those excellent older members, we really have to push to get them involved. Which, as I type and think about it, having a group member essentially be a recruitment specialist, that goes around looking for newer members to get involved and have them apply. Then have someone monitor their activity. Could be a difference maker, or one could say essential for a group to continue to work.

Great idea, Are you looking for any leadership roles??? (:

Real talk, though. Having a group that doesn't include newer members or older members is a bust on its own. Just because you're not ub3r, l33t, 3pic, in a group, an og, etc, doesn't mean you don't have something to bring to the table. 100% agree with this position.

I'll just throw my story out and see if its interesting enough.

I grew up poor. Like, when I graduated high school I was living in a shed that had a single light bulb. No running water, no insulation, no heat/air. Just a lightbulb in a shed. I was working every waking hour outside school to be able to eat and survive while also taking care of my siblings. I joined the Marine Corps the day I turned 18. Served until medical circumstances forced me out. Used experience to start a cyber security career. Worked up to $165k salary per year before I moved back home and started my empire. Currently still make low six figures but I just closed on a new primary residence today worth half a million. In addition to that I own outright two rentals, a city lot, one property under contract to sell, and another property lined up to buy once that closes.

I'm not an expert in anything, but I know enough and I know how to hustle.

If nothing else is gained from this post, I hope that reminds everyone that your life is what you make it. You are never destined to remain in shitty situations. YOU have the power to change your circumstance, but YOU have to put in the work.

I'm good at lounge posting / forum engagement and gaming if you ever need help with those. Spend most of my days with tech and computers so I try to keep up on what's happening and playing some games in my free time.

I would say Nintendo / PC are what I spend the most time on. I just built a PC and wouldn't mind helping members that had questions about gaming / computers in general.

Real talk, though.

Looking for leaders who are level-headed & good at what they do.

The coding sector, I believe is good atm.

That just leaves the Gaming & Finance sectors.

Looking for people who are active in sub-forms that have to do with gaming, finance, etc.

I DON'T CARE WHAT USER GROUP, GROUPS, OR HOW LONG YOU'VE BEEN ON HF.

Just impress me with your knowledge & give me a description of how you plan on leading the sector.

Drodeine - April 8, 2023, 8:42 am

After reading your posts here I figure I might as well give this a shot.

I believe I could bring some value and insight in both gaming & music sectors of the group being an ex-professional FPS player both on console & PC platforms. I have multiple years experience in the eSports scene and to this day I am up to date with everything happening in the scene.

I'm also a content creator on YouTube, I have around 12,500 subs currently. It's been about a year since I've made any content as I just got burnt out after dedicating 6 years to one game but the knowledge, networking & friends I have in the industry I believe can be useful for anyone trying to kickstart their career on YouTube, Twitch or any streaming platform. I would love to be apart of a group that would be interested in learning everything I know about social media algorithms, content creation & simply how to better yourself as a player & person in that space. Furthermore I would just be grateful to meet some more people from HF, play some games, maybe host some events in Discord. I'm very active & play almost every title that's released although my main titles are Rainbow Six: Siege, CS:GO & Escape From Tarkov. I maintain some the highest ranks, stats & play time in the titles above. I might not post a whole bunch in the public gaming section but if I had access to a more niche crowd like a group I would love to give all my knowledge & love of gaming to said community. Overall I have thousands of hours in multiple gaming titles, access to some insider information in the eSports scene and a great network of players.

On another note. I am also a music producer currently working on developing my own sound in the underground rap scene. Networking with multiple different artists & tons of other producers, engineers & sound designers. I love music and I love discussing it with other open minded individuals. My goal is to have a few decent sized placements by this summer, it would be great to share my music and passion with a group here. I'd be willing to share and teach anyone how to use DAWs, how to make music in said DAWs, sound design & anything related to music that I have knowledge on including networking & building a brand. I'd love to share all of this with members of HF but I feel it's more of a personal field which is why I think I could bring an aspect of value to Olympians.

Regardless, thank you for the opportunity. I respect you allowing individuals to have a chance of joining a group even if they haven't been here for months, years or decades. I think it will give members (including myself) that extra push to bring high quality content to HF.

Thanks.
