Thread: HOW CAN I INCREASE MY CREATIVITY?

TruthSpeaker - April 10, 2023, 7:48 am

Creativity is certainly a skill that only a small percentage of people have . The case might be that less than 5% of the population can create things ,let alone new things that none has ever imagined before .

Creativity is a powerful weapon so naturally it brings value and power to the one that owns it.

My question is if someone is indeed somewhat creative or has some original thoughts occasionally can he become a master of the field of creativity?

What should someone do to reach that higher level?

Dread.Reaper - April 10, 2023, 7:57 am

Think outside of the preverbal box.

Instead of thinking something cant be done, look at it in the approach of how CAN it be done.

Huge aspect to creativity is not allowing your mind to be confined by perceived boundaries.

This definitely a good point you are making but what about more practical things like reading , writing , playing a music instrument etc.

Can those things have an effect ?

Everything has an impact of course.

I find its the way people view the world around them.

The best thing I can recommend is try to remember back to being a kid.

How wonderous the world was and how everything was exciting and full of possibilities.

As we grow older we are mentally conditioned by society to the social norms. I find the most creative people are those who maintain a child like wonder about the world around them.

I get to experience this again watching my kids explore the world as they are growing up.

I believe dedication is the key for whatever you want to do. You can only be creative if you know all about it then practicing it again and again. Reading can also help to explore new ideas.

Try using powernaps and maximize the enviroment variables (music, lights , snacks)

James Burnham - April 10, 2023, 10:07 am

Many people are creative but their creations are not magnificent so they go unnoticed. I think focusing on greatness is more important than focusing on creativity.

You can create something that is good and then someone that is greater than you in working stamina will come and improve on it. You should try the same, go see who makes money, take his idea and scale it.

Also, creative people are sometimes labeled "weird" and that's another reason it's better to be industrious than innovative.

JNath - April 10, 2023, 10:12 am

You have to start believing that nothing in this universe is impossible, everything is possible if right steps can be taken and right mind is applied.

You have to escape the slave mentality of rate race and escape the world which is being controlled by handful of people.

You can be creative even if you're not born one by Yoga and doing something repetitive and becoming so perfect at it that you become the master of it and you will find your mind has awoken to new wonders.

If you want to be creative then you just start by gaining right karma, reading what universe is trying to tell you and loving someone unconditionally.

elslideo - April 10, 2023, 12:28 pm

I want to create a smart world map, like GTA, expect its 3D and can communicate with you.

Mac Miller - April 10, 2023, 12:59 pm

Creativity = effort / passion * time spend learning skill set of medium

Rin™ - April 10, 2023, 6:43 pm

So, when it comes to creativity, it's a skill that can definitely be learned and improved upon over time. While some people may have a natural inclination towards creativity, anyone can become more creative with practice.

If you want to become a master of creativity, it's important to develop a creative mindset and consistently practice your skills. This could mean setting aside time each day to write, draw, or brainstorm new ideas. It's also helpful to learn from others, seek out new experiences, and collaborate with people who have different perspectives and skills.

Remember, creativity is a process and it's important to enjoy the journey. So, don't be afraid to experiment, take risks, and try new things. With a little bit of practice and dedication, you can become more creative and unlock your full potential.

@OP Take a dose of LSD ?

qazzzzaq - April 10, 2023, 7:33 pm

Smoke some DMT or take some mushrooms.

I guess it depends in what way you want to increase your creativity. LSD and psychedelics are a short path, but you need to take precautions.

I think Dread.Reaper had a good answer.

Is this for long term effects?

AiDenti - April 11, 2023, 7:53 am

No joke, drugs. I've always been a creative person, but after doing psychedelics, my creativity is always much stronger.

Another way, romanticize the present. Look at life around you and see the beauty in it. See the tragedy too. Understand the significance of the things around you and deeply understand how they weave into the world.

Put yourself in situations to experience shock and awe. If you can be amazed by something, you can be inspired by it. Concerts, museums, sports, etc. Find what makes you feel alive.

Consume as much art as possible, and learn the significance behind it. I recommend looking deep into art from the 1950's to present. The artistic shift during this time is unprecedented.

Steal as much as possible. Creativity is just as much about reusing other peoples ideas as it is about coming up with your own.

Drugs will only help your creative process if you do them occasionally. It's about getting an experience to be inspired by, not about feeding your brain a "creativity chemical"

This means only inspired by the use after the use or ?

Drodeine - April 11, 2023, 9:46 am

Treat your body & mind with respect. Fuel yourself with clean foods, abstain from damaging substances (Alcohol & Hard Drugs). Allow yourself to be inspired and use your inspiration to create but like you said make things that haven't been done already wether it's drawing, making music, designing or art of any form. The most important part of being creative is simply making sure you're healthy first.

It means most people can't fully apply their skills when they're fucked up. Drugs won't help you hold a pencil steady or use music software, but they'll help you with ideas for drawings and music.

I disagree. Creativity has a huge overlap with mental health issues. While it's super important for creative people to maintain their health, I don't think that's the key to creativity. I've watched a lot of artists purposely stay in unhealthy situations because they feel like they're making their best work there. It's a rough place to be and I don't recommend it.

A lot of the creative process for a lot of artists involves molding things that already exist into new ideas. Don't shy away from making something just because it's similar to something else. Doing so is a slippery slope.

Just start thinking of stuff bro. Some people just have it, but if u don't just try stuff. If it sticks, cool. If it doesn't then keep trying.

That is very easy. Meditate and listen to specific music that increases creativity. You have to want it and believe it and stick with it and not give up.

I like brainstorming, where you either think in your head or you write down every idea that comes to mind. Get used to association style thinking, as well as free thought exercises too. You want to be able to train your brain to allow itself to wander a bit, so you don't get closed into routine

Right on with the brainstorm. Try taking something that's been done, and then improving it, or breaking it, or figuring out how it works. Make guesses, test it.

All of this will help you to think in new ways. Then you'll find that after a while of focusing on this, you'll start to do it naturally.

One can engage in activities that stimulate the imagination, explore diverse perspectives, embrace uncertainty, encourage curiosity, and foster a willingness to take risks and learn from failures.

Additionally, practicing mindfulness, exposing oneself to new experiences, and collaborating with others can also enhance creative thinking.

haha will definitely bring some new visions to the mind that's for sure.

Lately I've found my creativity going so much better without the smoke to be honest.
