Thread: What was your raise this year?

Beaks - April 14, 2023, 3:45 pm

What was your most recent raise? Please only say in PERCENTAGE.

I recently received a 3% raise. Hilarious. I live in a VHCOL city.

Meh , I can just say my barbershop is going 50% better than last year

My Computer - April 14, 2023, 8:23 pm

The most recent raise I got was 38.46%. I transitioned from an intern to a full-time employee at the same company.

Aeowulf - April 14, 2023, 8:35 pm

I got a laughable 3%. I've been thinking about going ahead and retiring. This ain't helping me stick around.

Vibe - April 14, 2023, 8:45 pm

I get durning winter but it was 6% this year normally we only get like 3%. I'll probably leave next year after 1st if it's 3% this year though

I don't earn a salary so my pay increases correlate with how my businesses are doing... grateful to say they are doing pretty good and pay is starting to prove worth while.

It is such a common case where the typical employee gets a single digit percent raise and I just don't think it's worth all the effort.

The only thing that is good about working for someone else is that you will always get paid the amount agreed upon or at least be owed it. Running a business you either make more than what you expect or make less than what you expected. Nothing is guaranteed . Also if you have employees you have to pay them regardless of weather you made money or not.

Yep! You've quite literally explained the pros and cons of both sides!

9-5 does provide comfort in knowing you will get paid the agreed amount, while entrepreneurial is very brutal in the early years. With consistency, eventually work out better than comfortable salary.

You guys are getting paid?

Pretty decent, luckily when I got this job I negotiated a $45k pay increase.

45k pay increase?

What does this mean?

I mean my previous role as an engineer (prior to this recent raise) was 45k below my current salary.

Search for jackie bieber in tiktok or instagram. I do the same thing but cant reveal myself ^^

Drawing with brushes in hair ?

spiderman6942069 - April 15, 2023, 9:43 pm

I got 10% to 78k in December

crazyinthedunya - April 24, 2023, 2:09 pm

It would have been 1% of annual salary (which is laughable), however moved role internally within the same organisation and went up 115%.

BiNBo - April 24, 2023, 2:14 pm

I get a nice 5% annual, assuming I meet all of my goals for the year. Luckily, I set my own goals for each year at the review so it's not too difficult to meet them if I set reasonable ones for myself.

TommyStark - April 24, 2023, 2:19 pm

Hey there.

I got a nice raise of almost 30%

LE: Still not enough to live like a normal human being tho

ChronoBiff - August 2, 2023, 7:34 pm

I think 5%? Sadly, this reminds me how bad inflation is right now.

Since I posted this initial thread, I recently negotiated a 22% raise, pretty excited about that. My base pay is already pretty high, so this is a meaningful increase.

Bluffer - August 3, 2023, 9:39 am

Got a dollar raise after 3 months at my job. Maybe a new raise soon as a promotion may be getting.

Fresku - August 3, 2023, 1:51 pm

Hmm, twice 5% market correction and once 5% raise, can't really complain but the market corrections already make clear that the company underpays.

Luckily im out of there soon for another 10% increase.
