I don't understand much about programming but you mentioned API's. In the near future I might need automation for Binance futures trading. If I send you the math can it be done and how much it might cost me? The math might be a bit complicated, so keep that in mind for the estimate. You can either reply here or in PM or not at all :D

It looks like there is a good amount of documentation for it, depending on the interface/interaction side of things and how you want to manipulate it, I could probably go below $1,000.

Can scripts only crawl web page data? Can server data also be crawled or analyzed? For example, by analyzing or capturing the parameter configuration of the server, the requirement of making the parameter configuration of the script closer to the server can be achieved
