I have no opinion regarding this matter as I do not watch any sort of pornography. However, there should be a clear line between abuse material and fantasy material. It's borderline when it comes to animations and drawing as these depictions can be categorized as "fiction" or "fantasy". Sometimes even stating that the characters are of age, despite the underlying reality of them not being of age. If someone wishes to view such material, they should also consider the repercussions of their country's laws regarding such material.

Stay away from detrimental material, and your life will come out for the better.

jfc bro you sound like ChatGPT ?

Who care's? It's not like there are real people involved. Everyone should be allowed to do whatever they want as long as they aren't directly affecting other people negatively. The only person you're hurting is yourself, and that's debatable.

I don't really care much for hentai the quality is always so shit.

People that are attracted to lolis are weird.

As for regular anime a lot of them take place in a school setting so everyone is automatically underaged. It's also a drawing, not a human. As long as it doesn't look like a kid it doesn't matter.

You can take a character and say they're 18+ and everyone is fine with it. Take the same exact character and say they're 16 and people have issues with it. Most anime shows are targeted and high schoolers thus the age matches theirs.
