Pretty Words For The Troubled Soul

I see you all trying so hard, trying to find a balance in this chaos that we call a life. You take on so much, for so long, asking nothing in return.

You worry about what you say, and who you say it to. You worry about your friends and family not seeing you as the person that you want to be. You worry about what you look like, and if your partner finds you attractive.

I see you looking, searching, all for some sort of sign that clearly states that all of your efforts have not been for naught. That you are not helpless in this whirlpool of life.

Here is that sign.

You are not helpless.

You are perfect, complete and worthy of being loved.

You just have to let yourself believe it.

Just helping the people who are.

Sometimes you find motivation in the most unlikely of places. Sometimes something as simple as something said online can be the spark you need that ignites the fire that is your resolve.
