Thread: Free Flight Conundrum

If you were given the gift of free domestic(USA) and international travel until the end of 2023, how would you take advantage of it?

Pentatonix - May 5, 2023, 9:09 pm

I'd make a list of sites to see around the world and start knocking them out one by one. Remote work is super prevalent in 2023.

I can't help but wonder about how unique this proposition is, and the extent to which it could be exploited. At the moment, I lack enough information about the possibilities to come up with anything creative enough on my own.

This is my dream as well! But its an expensive place if you don't know anyone, right? Also, if you could afford living there multiple days, how many would you go for?

I mean, technically you can do this through the Go Wild! pass through Frontier Airlines. They are offering unlimited flights through September 30th for like $500 lol. But who tf wants to fly internationally with Frontier airlines.

Haha! No this is strictly choosing a place and having the ability to go there, free of charge. Just the flight.

Vibe - May 6, 2023, 12:35 pm

Probably end up quitting my job and enjoy traveling for a year as much as I could.

bronzegods - May 6, 2023, 12:41 pm

I don't know about free flights but if you are interested in getting upto 60% off on domestic flights in USA. You can surely check out my service offering.

What if you were broke and only had a hundred bucks, but still had free travel, what would you do then? I'm super curious

I'm going to Japan for the third time in a months time. I love the country. Not really a fan of the culture and anime but the country is beautiful and everything is so cheap. It's just the flights are expensive. $1500 for my flight ?

Really?? Can you tell me more about your experience that made it affordable?

When I went 3 years ago it was $694. It's literally doubled and then sum. Makes travelling expensive. Thank god 1 month accom is only $757

Going with friends and using reputable AirBnbs is what's making it affordable this time. Last time I went it was £550 for 2 weeks in a hotel while its roughly the same costs for us to go to Osaka for 2 Weeks (£300) and Tokyo for 2 Weeks (£300), A Japanese Rail Pass is £285~ for 2 weeks (Allows you to book Bullet Trains, which costs anywhere from £50-80)

The actual cost of experiences and food in Japan is actually incredibly cheap. Most Ramen Bowls are like £3-8, visiting parks is usually free and temple entrance fees are on average £1.50-3 each.

Hiroshima Castle near Osaka is £2.20 to enter, the deer park is free to enter, deer crackers are £1.80, and the deer park temple is £2.20 entry. Concerts are usually around £15-30 if thats your thing.

The only things that are really expensive Japan are Western Experiences like Universal Studios (£50 base ticket price) or Disney Land (Nearly £90).

Even the average train price is around £0.90-1.10~ and you'd only need 3-5 of those a day. Its just overall such a cheap country to do things in.

That's so interesting! Most of what I've heard is that its ultra expensive, but no detail into why. I'm taking notes.

Hahaha hah lol why will you like to go for free? That can't happen unless you have a sponsor or anything, id Caribbean island will be better for free
