Seto Kaiba.

Nobody keeps it more real and consistent than Kaiba. A character many young men need to take after.

Satou, Tatsuhiro from "Welcome to the N.H.K." (N?H?K?????) - I could relate to him well.

Komatsu, Nana from "NANA" (??) - With this type of story telling, I could easily sympathize with her. Well rounded character.

Yamauchi, Sakura from "I Want To Eat Your Pancreas" (?????????) - This main character really stood out to me. She is very good. Anime was a memorable one.

I could take the easy way out and name an old ass character from an old ass anime, but i am not gonna do that. The GOAT at the moment for me, Senku Ishigami from Dr.Stone. IDK how much of the stuff he does in anime is actually applicable in real world scenarios, in fact it feels sometimes fantasy at times, but since i know nothing about Science other than basic shit, the idea of an MC who's not physically strong or capable but otherwise a genius being thrown into the World where everything has been reset to basically the Stone Age Era and hes trying rebuild civilization back to the Modern Day Era is pretty fucking cool to me and badass.

Kosmos - August 29, 2023, 9:47 pm
Hank Hill, Boomhauer easy second.

King of the Hill is an honorary anime, as the Japanese citizens loved it so much, they dubbed it in Japanese.

I'm genuinely surprised nobody hasn't mentioned a Gundam Series yet. I grew up around it and it's a shame I don't see more people getting into it. I wouldn't place this character as my all time favorite but Duo Maxell is right up, if you check out his backstory it's pretty messed up but relatable for me.

Top of my head

Erwin Smith from AOT.

Kento Nanami from JJK.

Both characters had very strong moral compass and gave everything they could for their duty, got nothing but respect for them.
