TPX - May 16, 2023, 3:31 pm

I can buy up to $2600 worth of eGift cards and sell them for 80% of the real price on PayPal.
Here is the list of what type of eGift cards I can buy to sell them:
Amazon.com eGift card ($5 to $500 per card)

Best Buy® eGift card ($5 to $500 per card)

Starbucks eGift card ($5 to $500 per card)

Uber Eats eGift card ($5 to $500 per card)

Lyft eGift card ($25 to $200 per card)

Airbnb eGift card ($25 to $500 per card)

Hotels.com eGift card ($15 to $500 per card)

Sephora eGift card ($10 to $250 per card)

Kohl's eGift card ($5 to $500 per card)

Macy's eGift card ($5 to $500 per card)

Where the eGift cards come from?

I live in France and I travelled to New York last week. On my return flight, we were told that the flight company had sold more seats than available and therefore they were offering money in exchange to volunteers who would accept to take the next flights. Which I did. I received $2600 to spend on gift cards. It's cool but these are gift cards that only work in the USA, so I can't do anything with them, which is why I'd like to sell them.

Contact me if interested :)
