I read somewhere that only 37% of Americans have passports. Where I live almost everyone has a passport. Does that mean that most americans never leave the country

Yes but gotta renew it and that costs a pretty penny

I have a passport, but I haven't left my country in 20 years.

Pootje - May 17, 2023, 2:54 am

I do have a passport

Rionxee - May 17, 2023, 5:51 am

Yea, I needed a passport when I was younger so my parents always renewed it for me. We got our renewed together for a family trip a few years ago so I'm good for awhile. I also ended up getting Global Entry.

Fyi, get CLEAR and TSApre.... makes an airport security experience so much faster and you'll never have a chance at getting the dreaded SSSS designator while flying.

Not from the USA, but I do have one.

Then again, if Americans wanted to go on a break somewhere, they could go to New York or Miami.

If I wanted to go somewhere with no passport, I've got Luton and Grimsby as choices.

Yep I got a passport... If not a passport, then what? O.o

Ducky - May 17, 2023, 12:50 pm

I've seen plenty of Americans who never once in their life leave the country.

Perks of being European. You have a totally new language and culture sometimes even at a 1-hour flight distance.

I've visited at least 7 countries within the EU and I also have a passport (haven't used it yet)

But if your country is a member of the EU you can use your national ID to travel without the need for a passport.

Being Canadian, I do have a passport so I can visit the states and get things cheaper :)

2020Sucked - May 17, 2023, 1:36 pm

Absolutely! I think having a passport is very important.

Truth - May 17, 2023, 2:17 pm

Yanix - May 18, 2023, 1:03 am

We do have our passports, the whole family for anytime we want to travel we can easily go.

CrimsonLanternfly - May 18, 2023, 10:29 pm

The United States is enormous, so most people don't need to get a passport to see new things. I have mine, but that's due to personal projects that sometimes take me to interesting locations. The spouse and children don't have theirs, and most people I personally know don't have theirs. just near where I live, it takes 8 hours to drive 75 MPH (120 KP/H) across just one state...you could cross an interesting portion of Europe in that time and see 4 countries!

Vitani's Mate - May 18, 2023, 10:47 pm

Yes.. I do have a passport which I REALLY need to renew since I will be going out of country in October.
