Alright, is YouTube ticking you off? These constant ads, with some being not skippable. And now, I'm not able to add a video to my queue as it's a premium feature now?

Truth - July 6, 2023, 7:27 pm

Pi-hole private DNS allows you to block them, but YouTube are constantly fighting this; so it's intermittent at best and a lot of effort.

When I had a pi-hole set up it didn't block YouTube ads cause they play with the video or something? I can't remember the exact reason but has it changed?

Why don't you just use ublock origin? You'll never see youtube ads again.

simtastic1 - July 15, 2023, 7:57 pm

don't even use ublock.

use "enhancer for youtube"
not only does it remove all ads strictly on videos, but it also gives you every single youtube premium feature without paying..

this one?

Celeezey - July 16, 2023, 2:29 am

If you want to go a step farther you can even get the extension "Sponsor-Block" which automatically will skip all the sponsored portions of videos on YT, it's community ran as well so MOST popular videos by the time you watch them has already had someone else submit the sponsor of that video and its skipped. That as well as u-block have been a blessing for my YT Viewing binges.

DashPHP - July 16, 2023, 2:51 am

I personally have YouTube premium. Way too many ads on normal accounts.

backtrack3r - July 16, 2023, 4:43 am youtube has a lot of problems on their mobile app, they need to fix it and leave the ad block people alone diablospartan - July 16, 2023, 5:25 am

Just get a premium subscription and you will not have any problem with ads

Maybe use a dns based adblocker? So route your traffic through such dns that's configured on your router

I've not been able to use the Youtube Watch Later feature in years. It's not a premium feature either so no clue as to why it stopped working. The ads on videos have gotten truly annoying. Some videos have ads now every minute. Ridiculous.

Aftershock4g - July 17, 2023, 2:11 pm

Id just get YouTube premium, on an android emulator make a google play account in turkey, then you can just pay with your normal card in turkey prices pretty sure a family plan costs like $1.50 for me each month. Can't beat it

Biggs - July 18, 2023, 12:46 am

I have never seen this, just get the premium lite, it's like 5.99 a month and u get no ads.

With all these streaming services, is YouTube premium even worth it?

Seems like basic services, with no real added value in my opinion.

Yeah it's not about streaming services, I mainly use YouTube to watch videos and I can't stand the skipable ads, it's a really nice thing to have which saves alot of time, so in my eyes it's worth it.

Ah you're talking about the YouTube app on your phone?

I don't have that problem on my laptop, since I'm not seeing any ads.

If you're referring to your phone, there are several apps that still can play YouTube videos in the background though.

Yeah I know but the apps that do allow that are ad packed though, and it's always better to have the original in my opinion. Also I get cashback on the premium so I basicly don't pay anything for it. :)

i just watch youtube shorts so i did not know this existed.

peperita - July 18, 2023, 1:11 am

Lately i had some unnecessary long and unskippable ads.

I never used adblock because i was told youtube content creator actually make money with ads so i don't mind supporting them, but damn.

casing - July 18, 2023, 2:37 pm

Just use uBlock Origin, bro. I haven't seen an add on YouTube since 2018.

Unfortunately I caved and just bought YouTube Premium. It's sadly worth every penny to me, but maybe not to others.

It's worth it for no ads, downloading videos to your phone and youtube music for sure.

Yes. It makes everything nice and simple. However, I understand OP's frustration. Ads are a virus, and they need to be removed in my opinion.
