Thread: Dear HackForums Richest Members?

N1ghtm4re - July 17, 2023, 12:58 am

What do you do? And why do you have at least 3 rows of HF awards?

Personally, if I were rich, I'd be in the real world with beautiful (and) ugly women, not buying a group on a board that'll die when the 50+ admin is gone

So out of curiosity what do you do? I'm not asking you guys that make less than $50 an hour, real money making men. What is your story? How did you make so much money to be able to casually buy HF groups, Awards, etc even knowing it was futile.

You don't have to be crazy specific, but what makes a Wealthy HF Member these days? Surely it isn't Ewhoring or Surveys/Ebooks.

I'm an Entrepreneur, so I am curious myself for sure.

DashPHP - July 17, 2023, 2:00 am

Bro this is nothin but a hate thread.

Why are you assuming those who spend money here have nothing better to do?

I've connected with many Made men on this forum and them buying awards is like buying candy from a corner shop lmao.

Quit the hate. They gettin laid much more than you no cap uhtred - July 17, 2023, 2:04 am

Ever thought about making connections with like minded people?

Stunner - July 17, 2023, 2:21 am

I mean people say HF will die all time just gives it a reason to last, Your hate is irrelevant tbh.

You could just say Elon. ?

Angela White - July 17, 2023, 12:08 pm

Because money isn't that much to some people. I wouldn't spend $2k on a group here, but really $2k isn't that much money. If you make $8,000/mo (only $96,000/yr), you could afford 2 groups a month on this forum.

Money is subjective. Some people have diff jobs / income sources that allow them to spend money in ways other people wouldn't. Same reason some people have gucci shoes.

This cracks me up, you HF members are so full of yourselves.

Edit: Let me explain, you joined 2022? What the fuck are you talking about lmao what do you know of "people say HF will die all the time"? Be serious bro, above that, I didn't say it would die nor did I imply any hate for this forum. I asked the wealthier members how they make their money, for educational purposes and for some reason several of you girls got your panties in a bunch.

Does anyone who actually makes money care to shed light on a topic that could help others? A "Job" doesn't get you to buying HF groups unless you make well over $60 an hour, I know this, because I have made such money- habits, tactics, and such outside of "work" is all this thread gravitated to

I don't understand the misdirected attitude you folks on the first page of the thread have but not that I care anyway.

The answer is going to be the same all the time.

Work hard to provide value

Work hard to market your value

Enjoy the gains from the sale of your value.

Then it becomes a Volume thing. That's it.

Anything more, you're asking to be spoon fed.

Not really. I own an OnlyFans Agency, several Clothing Brands, I sell used cars that I tune up, I own a Music Blog Platform in my local vicinity that makes money off of ads and several other mediums, I write comics and cartoons, I'm also an illustrator, and barely even scratching my pavement.

What you gave me are principals to live by, to acquire some wealth. I can apply that working for $12 an hour and still probably get no where long run. Imagine investing into all I named, and still trying to elevate off of $12 an hour, not possible. You'd take forever, whereas a lot of HF members seem to have endless money to blow. The answer wasn't going to be the same, Angela White and yourself decided to respond with logic, everyone else with ignorance and personal messages.

Fact remains any jokes I made in the OP don't constitute ridiculous and personal responses, and even then, Spoon Fed is crazy for someone inquiring on knowledge to better their life. That's the mindset of someone who sees life as a competition, which it isn't.

Sell software on autopilot and pocket roughly $1000 a day, which is enough to support my wife (who is a 10) and my step daughter (and previously a huge coke habit)

My step daughter thinks my awards are cool. So do I. Life is good brother.

ChronoBiff - July 18, 2023, 6:14 am

You have a lot of hate in your heart.

Tor - July 18, 2023, 6:16 am

I believe we all find fulfillment and joy in different aspects of life. For some, it's through wealth accumulation, and for others, it's through different types of recognition or human connections.

Consider this: each award we collect on HF, from the smallest token to the grandest achievement, serves as a symbol. They're not just representations of our individual achievements, but also of the networks we've built, the influence we've exerted, and the impact we've made within this community. These awards are a testament to our commitment, passion, resilience, and in some cases, the resources we've willingly invested.

Moreover, these recognitions can pave the way for further success. They can act as stepping stones leading to broader opportunities, partnerships, and advancements within and beyond the platform. Even if you think that buying HF awards or groups is futile, it's important to remember that these can be more than mere expenditures. They can be investments in our future, opening doors to larger-scale endeavors.

So while you might see only an ephemeral value in these online rewards, for many, they're tangible proof of their journey and commitment to this community, their unique story in this digital age.

huhm. For the time I was here, I think there were really only 2 people who were really rich. Some guy from Dubai and another person idk.

Anyway. Most people spending money on the internet (not only this forum) are terrible on handling money. They spend it on insignificant (imho) things. Some like to "fake it till you make it".

Nonetheless, everyone has their own freewill. If you want to spend 2k on awards instead of investing it, then that's your money.

I was curious about this too, OP, but it's a futile question to ask. Because you need to consider the point I made earlier. Some people are bad with money, so they spend it on insignificant (imho) things.

Disclaimer*: If you feel attacked by opinion, it's your problem. Of course, I am not talking about anyone particular. I understand that there are people who have accumulated awards over the years and weren't super rich but could afford such things.

santi12 - July 19, 2023, 5:01 pm

Depends what is rich to you, some people think 100k is rich, 1m, 5m, it doesn't make you leave your hobbies completely or not having groups, community or other earnings/contacts sources.
