just walk around, it can be quite nice. there is a guided tour of the fish market on trip advisor i would suggest (it may sound boring, but its actually quite nice and interesting). but overall, just explore, have fun, and dont be afraid to stay out late.

DashPHP - July 31, 2023, 7:01 am yes, we are planning to just walk and explore the places. 10k steps a day shouldn't be an issue. did you opt for JR rail pass? if yes, did you pre-booked it?

no we didnt opt for the JR rail pass, we would just pay when got to the station. tbh I didnt know that was an option, but if it saves money i would suggest it.

might go for it as we are planning to take shinkansen from tokyo - kyoto - osaka - hiroshima - tokyo. i just got to know about the jr pass calculator a few days back and this route might save us some bucks.

jr pass calculator (if anyone wants to check it out) > <https://www.japan-guide.com/railpass/>

I know it sounds nerdy, but I would be running speed tests on the internet over there. I'd be curious how much better it would be than the USA.

I'm planning to go sometime next year or the following year, depending how my finances are looking like. I plan to stay for 2 weeks and just explore. Plan to take the bullet train to Kyoto and Osaka, check out some shrines and goto the anime spots and pokemon spots. Definitely interested in checking out some Maid cafés too.
