Frequently Asked Questions

Why are you selling a Masterclass if by the looks of it, you're making enough money already? I absolutely understand the interest behind this query, and I'm delighted to respond to it. To begin with, while I have been fortunate enough to reach a certain amount of financial success, my entrepreneurial mindset drives me to seek out new prospects for growth. I am convinced that diversifying my revenue streams is a wise decision that will help me to continue growing and prospering.

Second, I'm not the type of person who accepts mediocrity. As a sensible and rational person, I understand that offering actual value is the key to success in any effort. By providing this Masterclass, I am able to share my knowledge and expertise with others, empowering them to attain their objectives and aspirations.

How can your YouTube Automation Masterclass help me grow my channel more effectively? Perfectionism is entrenched in my approach, and I put my heart and soul into providing my participants with an exceptional experience. By investing in my Masterclass, you can be confident that you're getting the most value for your money. It's not just about making money; it's about making a genuine difference in the lives of individuals who choose to study with me.

Will I learn how to automate certain tasks without compromising the authenticity and engagement of my channel?

My Masterclass emphasizes the value of honesty and participation. You'll learn how to use interactive components and personalized content to automate monotonous chores like video uploading and data analysis while still maintaining a true relationship with your audience.

How do you address potential concerns about YouTube's policies and guidelines when implementing Automation methods?

I fully understand the significance of adhering to YouTube's standards and guidelines. Throughout the Masterclass, ethical and white-hat automated approaches are highlighted to guarantee that your channel adheres to YouTube's requirements and continues to develop in a sustainable manner.

What is the recommended investment amount to make in order to see significant growth and results from the YouTube Automation Masterclass?

When it comes to investment options, there are three interesting possibilities to consider. The first is the do-it-yourself technique, which requires time and effort. You can also choose full outsourcing, with video expenses ranging around $50 per video. Semi-outsourcing is a more cost-effective choice, coming in at around $23 per video. The decision on how frequently to upload every month is entirely in your hands and is determined by how quickly you want to attain success through YouTube Automation. Remember, with steadfast consistency and relentless persistence, a single video can produce over $3000, quickly recouping your whole investment.

Ease of Use: 5/5

The chapters are very detailed and to the point. No clutter, vocabulary issues, or any type of confusing phrases that will throw you off or leave you lost. Author provides image illustrations on top of the details he put into these chapters, which makes it very beginner friendly.

My personal thoughts: I have no experience with YouTube what from a creator standpoint(just a viewer).

This Masterclass the Author put together make me want to put my foot in the door and there is no better way to start with a masterclass like this which will save you a lot of time compared to doing it yourself.

If I come across a problem or if I have any questions I will ask the author(op) for some assistance, but the support is there. The author reaches out to me frequently make sure I'm good and if there are any questions I need to ask he will always be there.

I will be updating this review most certainly. Interesting master class, very intrigued by it. This is all new to me, so I'm definitely eager. Thank you (op) for putting this beautiful master class together. You've made it very descriptive as possible, especially for a newbie like me that's tapping into this kind of industry. I will be looking forward to reading some more.

Will the videos be made for that price or is it just an "course"?

(Aug 8, 2023 09:11 AM)Carmine Jr. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Will the videos be made for that price or is it just an "course"?

The pricing on the thread design is purely the Masterclass itself. It will give you every piece of information you'll need in order to start, manage & maintain a successful automation channel.

You can either:Outsource video production: Between $50 - $55 per video (You only need to come up with video topics. Your job is purely niche research, topic research & managing the YouTube channel itself)?

Semi outsource video production: Between $20 - $25 per video.

Fully do it everything yourself: Costs you your time.

Note; When I first started, I did everything myself. Reason being because it is now way easier for me to give proper instructions to my freelancers + I know what a good YouTube video has to have in order to go viral.

If you have any further questions, please do reach out.

For other people reading this post:

TLDR: YouTube Automation is not easy, there is no magic bullet. You can become financially independent from it, but only if you put in the work required. If you wish to go down the rabbit hole yourself, then YouTube itself is a decent place to start learning some basics. If you wish to learn every detail from A-Z, this masterclass is for you. Of course, no matter what tier is bought, personal support will provided with it. I update the Masterclass sporadically, but the next major update is due at the end of Q4/Early Q1.

I created this masterclass with the intention to guide you to your success, not to give you a step 1 -> step 2 -> step 3 -> make thousands of dollars. There is no holy grail masterplan that will guarantee 100% success with little to no effort, forget it.

This Masterclass is purely a shortcut to success with YTA.

You can either find it all out yourself which will require:

- A shitload of time learning the business model from the inside out.
- A shitload of falling on your mouth because it's a totally new business model that you've never done before.
- A shitload of money because I know for a fact, costly mistakes will be made.

Then in the end, will you stay persistent with it, or will you eventually just take the L and say YouTube Automation is a scam?

With my Masterclass:

- Your learning curve is depreciated to a mere 1-2 months depending on how much time per day you are willing to free up in order to sit down and learn.
- You will of course still fall on your mouth, just 85% less than if you were figuring it all out by yourself. I'm 100% transparent with this. In the beginning, you will probably pick a wrong niche, hire the wrong editor. These are just beginner mistakes, been there, done that.

The YouTube Automation Formula is pretty simple:

Niche + Format + Excellent? ??Execution = Success

The Formats & Excellent Execution is what my Masterclass offers you. Niche of course you'll have to research yourself, but I created a plethora of chapters on Niche Research as well.

What's your estimated RIO for Say a month of daily YT videos?

xPlutus - August 10, 2023, 4:25 am

(Aug 10, 2023 12:10 AM)x.Vibes.x Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) What's your estimated RIO for Say a month of daily YT videos?

Thanks for your question!

TLDR:

If you do all the steps correct from the start, and really, but I mean really do proper niche research, then I know for a fact that the ROI will be after two months, especially when uploading daily (operating on a channel from scratch). I must note though, doing EVERYTHING 100% correct, especially as a beginner, is very hard. Not impossible, but very hard. When I first started out a little over 4 years ago (using a pre-monetized channel), it took me 4-5 months to breakeven. This of course due to the fact that I was still in my learning period.

Channel from scratch: ROI ~2 months

Pre-Monetized Channel: ROI ~1 month

^If you really put in the effort (GOOD niche research, good videos, trying to improve 1% everyday, look at your data and improve accordingly)

If you would like more details on my above answer, please do read the longer version below.

It's quite hard to give an exact estimate because it relies on a few very important factors:

1. Will you start a channel from scratch, or will you buy a pre-monetized channel?
2. Will you do the proper proper niche research?

See it like this, two categories:

Category 1: You position yourself inside a niche which has 25+ competitors and you upload daily for a month.

Category 2: You position yourself inside a niche which has 4-8 competitors and you upload daily for a month.

By positioning yourself in the second category with 4-8 competitors, you greatly increase your chances of creating viral videos, thus giving you a higher likelihood of achieving breakeven more quickly.

If you choose to start a new channel from scratch (which is the safest option), follow all the steps meticulously and don't just dive into a niche that you "think" has potential. Instead, select a niche that you KNOW has potential (backed by data), then you will likely be eligible to apply for the YouTube Partner program during the first or second week of the second month since you started running the channel.

^This means, the first month you won't earn a single penny, but you will get massive views & subscribers. Once you apply for YPP (YouTube Partner Program) and they accept you, you will be able to put advertisements on all the videos of the previous month (few buttons to click and done) & all your upcoming videos.

When using a pre-monetized channel, you simply start earning from day 1. The only thing you'll need to make sure of, is positioning yourself inside a golden niche.

- The downside of a pre-monetized channel, is that you don't know views/subs are botted or not. If so, then the channel is doomed. If not, then no need to worry.

An organic Pre-Monetized Channel costs around $500-$800. I strongly recommend starting a channel from scratch.

Hope this answer was helpful. If you have any further questions, please do send me a message!

Sure thing.

Learning you how to start, manage and maintain a YouTube faceless channel (a channel that does not require a human being in front of the camera) while benefiting from ad revenue and or other monetization methods.

Last months result on one of my channels.

$6k a month would make anyone happy I get that but this years RPM is very low compared to the previous years, thus I'm not as satisfied as normal.

Will update the thread once I get more info on this matter as I've heard other people are experiencing it as well.

Thanks for your feedback mate, hope you're enjoying your vacay! Do let me know once you get back!

The summer vacation is over, which means we're approaching a time when it gets dark earlier, colder, and rainier. But instead of focusing on the "end of the year," I'd like to ask you to think about where you want to be in 365 days.

Most people aim for success within a month, but in my opinion, the key is achieving long-term success. We've all had our one-hit wonders, where we scored that amazing long-range goal or aced that one exam with beginner's luck. But as they say, one swallow does not make a summer!

Give yourself time, but more importantly, give yourself an open mindset to learn as much as possible.

Ask yourself: How much time am I truly investing in acquiring new knowledge on a daily basis?

Successful entrepreneurs often excel because they do something many others don't: they consistently learn and maintain discipline.

Being eager to learn and disciplined can be developed, but it won't be easy. It's also true that one person may have discipline and interest in certain subjects but not in others. Focus on the areas you naturally have an interest in and can specialize in.

Give yourself 365 days to specialize in what you're passionate about, and see how quickly you'll achieve success!

I once told myself I wanted to read 10 sales books. After reading those 10 books, a whole new world opened up to me, making it much easier to close specific sales deals. Once I saw the power of daily knowledge acquisition, I became addicted to reading books, and I continue to do so to this day.

My personal life motto is: Today's success is the result of yesterday's hard work.

Enjoy your Tuesday, everyone!

xPlutus - September 21, 2023, 11:18 am

Today: Handy YouTube Formulas You Don't Want to Miss! ?

1. $\text{Total Views} / \text{Total Subscribers} = \text{Views Per Subscriber}$

Views Per Subscriber tells you how many views your channel currently needs on average to gain 1 subscriber. Personally, I aim for 1 subscriber per 100-200 views for a new channel. This number will increase over time as you gain more returning viewers.

2. $\text{Total Watch Hours} / \text{Total Subscribers} = \text{Watch Hours per 1 subscriber}$

$(4000 - \text{Current Number of Subscribers}) / \text{Watch Hours per 1 subscriber} = \text{Number of subscribers you STILL need to reach your watch hours}$

This figure is handy for identifying the bottleneck on your channel. Is it acquiring watch hours (often a challenge for short-form content) or gaining subscribers (often an issue for long-form content)? In an ideal world, you'd achieve 1000 subscribers and 4000 watch hours simultaneously, allowing you to apply for the YouTube Partner Program without delay. However, this is often not the case.

3. $(1000 - \text{current number of subscribers}) \times \text{views needed per 1 subscriber} = \text{Total Views STILL Needed for 1000 subscribers}$

This calculation helps you determine how many views your channel still needs to reach 1000 subscribers. Keep in mind that this is based on your channel's statistics, and a high-quality video might require fewer views, while poor-quality videos may require more. It provides a solid guideline for working toward a goal.

4. $(4000 - \text{current watch hours}) \times 60 = \text{Remaining Required Watch Minutes}$

$\text{Remaining Required Watch Minutes} / \text{Average View Duration} = \text{Number of Views Needed to Reach Your Watch Hours}$

This is a useful way to understand how many views you still need to achieve your 4000 watch hours.

By using the answers from points 3 and 4, you can gain a clear understanding of the difference in views needed between your required watch hours and your required subscribers in order to get monetized.

I understand this may seem a bit challenging at first, but with a little experimentation with the formulas, you'll see that it's not as daunting as it appears. ?

(Sep 23, 2023 02:37 AM)NulldB Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Does this work better with a female voice? Also accent matters?

Would it work well using face or just face free

Thanks for your question!

Voice choice depends on content and audience. For makeup tutorials, a female voice (young or mature) fits. For Motocross or similar topics, consider a male voice. Both can work, depending on niche, style, and audience age. Thus it totally depends on what niche & video's you're willing to create.

Regarding showing your face or not:

Pros of Showing Face: Stronger audience connection.

Personal, unique identity.

Better promo/sponsorship prospects.

Cons of Showing Face: Tied to the channel.

Harder to sell the channel.

Time-intensive.

Pros of Remaining Faceless: Scalability and easy channel sale.

Less time required (with outsourcing).

Manage multiple channels.

Cons of Remaining Faceless: Weaker personal connection.

Slightly less high-paying sponsorships (depending on niche).

My class teaches you faceless youtubeing but ultimately, it's your choice which route you'd like to take.

No need to apologize at all, these are actually great questions!

I haven't come across "deep facelive" yet, but I just looked it up. I've been using <https://www.synthesia.io/> in the past. However, it's worth noting that YouTube has started blocking accounts that use AI-generated faces. Deep faking could potentially offer a solution to this issue. Personally, I prefer faceless channels because they allow me to easily monetize and sell them down the line.

Regarding "buying a channel, analyzing face and voice, and replicating," I assume this pertains to your previous question. If not, then I'll answer is the way I interpreted your question: In my experience, I recommend purchasing a monetized channel only if you already have a clear understanding of what works and can start on the right foot from day one. If you're new to the YouTube scene, starting a channel from scratch is often a better choice, as it allows room for trial and error.

As for live promotions, the short answer is yes, they can be profitable. However, I personally don't go live with my channels nor do I use video premieres. My income primarily comes from these sources:

Ad Revenue: The YouTube channel itself serves as the foundation.

Sponsorship Deals: I secure fixed monthly payments through sponsorship agreements.

Affiliate Marketing: I incorporate affiliate links in video descriptions and mention them within the videos.

Dropshipping: I have a dropshipping site tied to the channel.

Blogs: I'm also planning to create dedicated blog websites associated with the channel. I'll use AI to convert YouTube scripts into blog posts and monetize them through Google ads.

Please let me know if this addresses your question about "buying a channel, analyzing face and voice, and replicating." If not, feel free to rephrase your question, and I'll do my best to assist you. Sorry, English isn't my native language.

Let's kick off the day with a valuable message! ?

Subject: Uploading the Same Content to 5 Channels

A strategy that my colleagues and I employ is to upload the same videos/thumbnails and nearly identical titles to a maximum of 5 different YouTube channels!

Why? —> We've been experimenting with this strategy for 10 months now, and it turns out that not every YouTube channel has an equal chance of breaking through.

I've seen too many instances where a channel with an identical video and thumbnail struggled to reach <50 views, while it soared to 100,000+ on another channel.

How is this possible? No clue. Does it work? Yes!

The beauty of it is that creating channels is FREE. So not doing it would be reducing your chances of success, which, in my opinion, would be a shame.

How does it work? ?

- 1) Create multiple YouTube channels under one email address (otherwise, you'll go crazy with creating emails and remembering passwords).
- 2) Upload the SAME videos with the same or slightly different thumbnails (your choice).
- 3) Alter the title slightly. Changing one word is often enough, but you can experiment.
- 4) Be patient. Our best channel now had zero traction for 6 days before suddenly taking off.
- 5) See which channel performs the best and ultimately stick with it. We often determine whether a channel will succeed within the first 5 videos.

A few important key statistics:

Evergreen CTR: Minimum 10%+

News CTR: Minimum 15%+

Evergreen: Have patience for a month.

News video: Within 48 hours, you'll know if your video is gaining traction. Most views come within the first 48 hours.

Wishing you all the best of luck!

How do you plan to end the year?

As we approach the final quarter of 2023, I believe everyone faces some crucial choices. Will you wait and complain when things don't go the way you want in life, or will you write down your goals and start taking action this week? Achieving something requires time, effort, and perseverance. The sooner you start, the sooner you'll achieve your goals.

Do you want to have a fit body by next summer? Then you need to start working out now.

Do you want to master a new skill by next summer? Then you need to start learning now.

Do you want to have successful YouTube channels by next summer? Then you need to start taking action now.

Most people think you have to take big leaps immediately, but it's actually the opposite that works.

It's the small steps that, when combined, create significant progress. Look at how a baby develops. Initially, they can only sit and lie down, but as the baby grows and learns, they start crawling before taking those first small steps on their feet and eventually, as adults, they can take significant strides.

For anyone who has struggled this year, both professionally and personally, those struggles are the small steps that will lead you to take big steps in the future.

Don't give up, look ahead with optimism, and let's lay the foundation now to make 2024 an amazing year.

xPlutus - September 28, 2023, 12:30 am

You are Going to Succeed! ?

Why am I so sure you're going to succeed?

?? Because you made the choice in the past to invest in yourself by purchasing this course.

? Most people blame external factors for everything happening in their lives. A few examples ? "I'm too stressed from work, so I don't have the energy to study in the evenings." "It's raining, so I'll postpone my morning walk." "I gained weight because of the holidays."

? I could go on, and I won't lie; I've fallen into these traps too. But what I've recently become aware of is that the only one holding me back is myself.

"I'm too stressed to study in the evenings" ? I can also wake up earlier and spend 15 minutes learning. If I do that for a year, I'll have acquired several new skills.

"It's raining, so I'll postpone my morning walk" ? What's the real issue with rain? I always shower after a long walk, whether it's because I'm sweaty or because I got wet. It doesn't make a difference.

"I gained weight because of the holidays" ? Ultimately, it's my decision to overeat. I can compensate by exercising a bit more to maintain my weight.

? In the end, YOU are the only one holding yourself back.

You've already taken the most challenging step: purchasing this course. Psychologically, this is where most obstacles lie, and you chose to invest in yourself.

?? Now, the only thing left is not to limit yourself by blaming external factors for your results.

Do you have a low AVD (Average View Duration)? ? Don't immediately blame your freelancers. Dive into the world of scriptwriting, voiceovers, and video editing so you can provide better feedback and hire better people (I spent dozens of hours on this last year).

Do you have a low CTR (Click-Through Rate)? ? Don't blame the thumbnail artist. Research how people are psychologically triggered and provide better feedback.

Do you have few views? ? Don't blame the algorithm. Check if you have a clear title structure and a well-defined target audience description. Look at your competitors' successful titles and add a unique twist.

? Entrepreneurship isn't easy. There are ups and downs, but in the end, YOU are the one who decides whether you'll be successful or not.

You can easily determine this by saying: "I will always invest in myself to become more valuable, resulting in future financial rewards."

? As parents, it's entirely normal to invest in our children by sending them to school, arranging extra tutoring, exposing them to educational institutions, and letting them participate in sports. We know that by doing this, we help our children acquire new skills, making them more valuable in the eyes of society. And we understand that the more valuable they are, the better chances they have of a financially secure future.

However, it's disheartening to see that many of these same parents don't look in the mirror and invest in themselves.

? Let us be that small group of adults in society who do want to continue investing in ourselves.

xPlutus - October 3, 2023, 2:24 am

New Week and the Start of Q4! ?

? You still have 3 months to wrap up 2023 on a high note and make strides in 2024.

Take a moment to jot down the goals you aim to achieve by the end of this year.

? Don't just write them down; share them with those around you. Research has shown that when you share your goals, you feel more accountable to stick to them.

? Don't be afraid of setbacks. After all, what is failure, really? Failure is a concept invented by humans; it doesn't exist in nature. When you try something and the outcome isn't what you or others expected, you haven't failed – you've positioned yourself to learn.

Why is there a term called "tuition" but not "failure-tuition"? Because everything you do in life is a lesson.

? If you set a goal to lose 5KG in 3 months and you've shed only 3KG, you haven't failed. First, you've successfully lost 3KG, and second, it gives you an opportunity for self-reflection to understand why you didn't reach that 5KG mark.

? The key with "lessons" and "tuition" is to examine internal factors, not external ones. Hold yourself accountable, take responsibility, and create a plan to ensure you stay on track with your goals next time.

? When I needed 36 videos to get my first 1000 views, I could have blamed it on the YouTube Algorithm for the first 35 videos, but that's just nonsense. I've since managed multiple channels where the first video soared above 100K views and even hit 1 million+. What's the difference? I learned along the way.

? Stay open to learning, take ownership, and before you know it, you'll achieve all your goals!

Everything gets more saturated by the year, but that doesn't mean that once you reinvent the wheel, it's very much possible to still gain success.

People leave the market because they believe the market is too saturated, and that gives new opportunities for people who can think creatively and innovate.

Any other questions, do let me know.

? Making Your Own Videos or Outsourcing?

I receive this question quite often, and I thought it would be helpful to jot down the pros and cons.

? I initially started creating my own scripts and thumbnails because I couldn't find a scriptwriter who met my exacting standards—yes, I can be quite meticulous at times ?

? The same went for thumbnails. Mine might not have been exceptionally beautiful, but they consistently achieved a high click-through rate, often exceeding 20%.

Later, I reverted to outsourcing everything, but why?

? Advantages:

- 1) You reduce the time per video.
- 2) The only way to scale is by working with others.
- 3) You leverage specific skills and expertise—especially in scriptwriting and video editing.
- 4) The costs are lower when you break them down.

For example, with an average production team, about 10 hours of total work go into creating a video. $\text{€}75/10 = \text{€}7.50$ per work hour.

The average hourly wage in the Netherlands is €14.

Suppose you need 2 hours to provide feedback per video, leaving you with 8 hours to work while your team handles the rest.

$8 * €14 = €112.$
 $€112 - €75 = €37$ earned.

And this is calculated with minimum wage. If you earn more than minimum wage, the difference only becomes more significant, making it more worthwhile to work yourself and outsource your video production. Otherwise, you're effectively lowering your hourly wage to €7.50.

If you're aiming for higher-quality video editing, you might spend 20-30 hours on editing alone, further widening the gap.

I believe it's crucial for you to see this calculation because the common perception is that making your own videos is cheaper, but that's not the case when you consider opportunity costs.

? Disadvantages:

- 1) You become dependent on others.
- 2) You need to communicate extensively and clearly convey your preferences. This can be challenging.
- 3) Costs come out of your account, while working more translates to a paycheck at the end of the month. Keep this in mind.

Now, let's move on to the aspect of making videos yourself.

? Advantages:

- 1) Total control over your video—this can be beneficial if you know what you're doing. But I also see this as a drawback since you can't be an expert in everything.
- 2) You don't have to spend money. You pay with your time—though remember, we just saw that if you're paid for your time, it's better to outsource video production.
- 3) You learn how to scriptwrite and edit along the way.

? Disadvantages:

- 1) It consumes an extreme amount of time.
- 2) You can't scale up.
- 3) It's effectively more expensive than outsourcing.
- 4) The quality will, in most cases, lag behind working with experts (especially in video editing).

I hope this has provided fresh insights for your Friday evening ?

Whatever you decide to do, it's all good, as long as your choice is a conscious one ?

xPlutus - October 27, 2023, 1:25 am

? Blaze Your Own Trail!

? It made headlines again yesterday. More companies went bankrupt compared to the previous year.

? Such news articles are becoming increasingly common, underscoring the importance, now more than ever, of having control over your income streams.

? YouTube is genuinely an ideal platform to break free from the fear of being jobless down the road.

? I get it; every beginning is tough. I had my struggles at the start too. But before you can run, you have to learn to crawl and walk first.

??? You have complete control over how fast you learn to crawl and walk. Others can assist and support you, but you've got to take the steps yourself.

??? Surround yourself with people who can propel you forward, but also dive into learning something new every single day.

? My most significant piece of advice to everyone is to "invest in yourself."

?? You can't escape spending money and time. The amount you invest is entirely up to you.

? I'm personally a fan of books, and the knowledge I gain from them is incredibly valuable to me.

? Additionally, I invest in creating high-quality videos. I'm discovering more and more that going cheap ends up being costly.

? It's truly fantastic to see that people who do invest in themselves are making remarkable progress in such short time frames.

?? Wishing everyone success today!

xPlutus - November 1, 2023, 6:31 am

? We're in the midst of Q4!

? Q4 is in full swing, and the RPMs are already on the rise.

? Recently, I've refocused on my channels after working on other projects for a while.

? As you can see, this shift in focus has made a world of difference. Revenues have increased tenfold, with two of our channels currently generating $500+ per day while keeping costs under $100 per channel.

? But focus alone isn't enough. So what else have I done?

Longer videos - less competition in longer videos, and a higher AVD (Average View Duration) makes us more valuable to YouTube.

Adjusted title style - simplified thumbnails, added more contrast, and witnessed a significant boost in CTR (Click-Through Rate).

I've identified a trend in title patterns and we're fully capitalizing on it like a cash cow ?.

? Besides, I have several other channels in operation and I'm in the process of launching some exciting new ones. I'm also experimenting with new formats to provide you with more opportunities for success and keep the Masterclass updated on the latest in the world of YouTube.

? Ultimately, I believe that teamwork is the key to making dreams work.

When selecting a niche, it's crucial to assess the market phase. Personally, I prefer entering niches around one-fourth into the institutional investor phase. This timing provides proof of concept while still offering substantial growth potential.

Currently, we're witnessing a saturation in police bodycam, interrogation, and court-related content—a stage characterized by heightened "greed." I can assure you that, sooner or later, this niche will experience a collapse affecting numerous individuals.

Given that we're rapidly approaching the end of the saturation cycle, likely within the next six months, please take this into consideration. It's akin to crypto trading: when a niche becomes the talk of everyone and their mom, it's not the ideal time to invest. The collapse is imminent.

xPlutus - November 19, 2023, 3:15 am

The new channel's kicking off strong with one of its initial videos hitting a solid 30k views in less than 24 hours! Plus, it's pre-monetized, and the RPM within this niche clocks in at a cool $4.

So, here's the math breakdown: Video costs amounted to $70. With 27,500 views, it brings in $110. $(27500 / 1000 * $4)$

That means this video is already turning a profit. It had a one-time investment of $70, and now, it's a profit-making machine!

This channel deals with news, and here's the kicker: if a topic fits the niche, most views pour in within the first 48 hours of upload. This success story is exactly that—a clear indicator to keep making videos on this topic and squeeze every bit of potential out of it.

For those eyeing a dive into YouTube Automation, I've got an exclusive deal on my other sales thread. Invest $827.97 $699.97, and you'll snag a Pre-Monetized channel plus a Tier 3 copy of my Masterclass (For the first 2 buyers)!

January is known for being quite poor performing for YouTube creators, what are would your advice be to customers who have bought recently? Considering they can probably expect a rough time since their growth will be smack bang in the middle of that period.

xPlutus - November 21, 2023, 5:21 am

(Nov 21, 2023 06:03 AM)InspectorGadget Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) January is known for being quite poor performing for YouTube creators, what are would your advice be to customers who have bought recently? Considering they can probably expect a rough time since their growth will be smack bang in the middle of that period.

The thing with that is, it doesn't reflect the views that are coming in, it's the RPM that goes up and down depending on which quarter of the year. For example some channels who have an average RPM of $6 in October, November and December, could get an average RPM of $3.5~$4 during the first quarter, after which it goes up again during summerseason.

Students don't have to worry about the amount of views, likes or subscribers they will be getting because it doesn't increase nor decrease depending on which month/quarter of the year we're in. Instead they should be aware that the amount of money they can/will earn varies on the different seasons of the year because of the fluctuation in RPM.

Due to this, my advice would be the same as I'm doing personally which is: staying consistent. Due to those "slower" periods, a lot of new creators tend to leave the game fairly quickly simply because they aren't earning the money they had in mind they'd earn. Because of this, a chunk of the competition goes away, which ultimately benefits people who; 1. stay in the game and 2. newcomers who see this as an opportunity.

A last thing I'd like to say is that students who would buy the Masterclass between now and January, and start a channel from scratch (so without a pre-monetized channel) basically don't have to worry about this at all, since they first have to reach the milestones of the YouTube Partner Program before they even see the RPM metric on their Analytics page haha.

Hope this answer clarifies your query. Any other questions feel free to ask.

Honestly, I was hoping to see some results from the vouch copies.. it's far too common for people to receive the vouch copy, write a review and then do nothing further, pretty pointless if you ask me. I want to see them attempt the method(s) and share their results, otherwise their testimonial is pretty meaningless.

I fully agree with you. Not gonna lie but I've expected more from the vouchers/buyers with all due respect (no offense to them).

I contacted a few buyers in October/November on how it's going or if I can help them with anything YT related, but they didn't even read it (but they were online in the meantime). I offer full support no matter what package is bought, but I'm not going to keep babysitting and repeat asking them on their progress or if I can help with anything without getting a single answer from them for weeks/months. My time is worth more than that.

Nonetheless, I make decent money myself so I'm not stressing about sales or anything. I will update the class when I can since I find it fulfilling to keep the product quality high, and to all current buyers (no matter if you didn't respond to me earlier, no biggie), you may contact me if you need any help. Also seems I can't find your telegram anymore?

Totally understand. I haven't really been working on the masterclass as much as in the beginning simply due to the fact that the customers I do have haven't reached out to me for help whatsoever. That, in combination with no new inquiries, got me demotivated to update the course with the latest knowledge, as it required me a lot of time to get it out here on the market in the first place.

I'm still making money with YouTube; it's just that I've also gotten involved in some new startups that require a lot of time in the beginning.

With that being said, current sales are halted because I don't like to sell outdated items. Additionally, I currently have no ETA on the new updates because I see there is no demand for them on HF. I am also really busy with office space, new startups, and other ventures at the moment.

Regarding my username, I changed it, but since I found out I cannot edit my thread anymore with the new username, I just reverted it back (so no one can try to scam under my name) @PlutusYT.

I will not be closing this thread because then I will not be able to open it again in the future.

Maybe not really the answer you were hoping to receive, but unlike other sellers, I try to be honest in what I do/sell.

You should definitely continue to post updates on your progress, even if you don't plan to sell anything anymore, I like following it and am planning on starting some faceless YouTube channels myself.

I personally think the issue here is pricing, I don't think your current model is suitable for the HF marketplace - seems a little steep, and unfortunately the lack of a lengthy testimonial with actual results, from one of the vouch copies further cements this.

I agree with the pricing aspect, I just can't lower them significantly due to the size of the class itself. I guess it is what it is.

Do hit me up on my telegram if you would like to spar a little from time to time about YT!

I appreciate the transparency - i might hit you up to see if we can figure something out as we talked at length a few months ago.

Decided to throw a 55% discount on all the packages as the class is not fully up to date at the moment. Still holds a lot of value.

Package features will remain intact.

If interested, either pm me or hit me up on TG.
