You can earn Bytes just by being active.

Don't spam posts for the Bytes as it's a very quick way to get yourself banned.

If you really want to buy the Bytes, you should check out the Currency Exchange forum: Currency Exchange

Either way, make sure you use Contracts and read the Help Docs before trading with anyone on site - if you don't, HF's staff/community won't be able to help you in the event that you make a bad deal.

They applied automatically when you upgrade.
Also now you can do daily check in thread for 25 free bytes a day seen this playbook over the years. While doing this they start making another account using a residential proxy service.

He bought bytes from someone, that gave him +10 after that he bought l33t with the bytes.

Anyways, welcome to HackForums.

then he bought l33t. Trust me he will work into the market place. I seen this every year. The go to the market place promise some revolutionary rat tool or ebook that will change your life and then exit scam people. While doing this process he makes many more accounts and repeats the process. $200 there... $500 over there... upgrades account then creates new account with new ip. then rinse and repeat. Or maybe he's actually new here and never had an account on HF before? You don't need to automatically assume a new user with leet is farming accounts to scam.

Anyways, welcome to the forum, hope you'll enjoy yourself here :)

(Aug 8, 2023 09:56 PM)phantomman55 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) because people new to this website don't know what the byte system is. Normally it takes a while for a brand new member to figure out what this site offers. For you on day one buying bytes and knowing what they're and then getting a +10 rep then buying leet.

This is what most scammers on hf do. They work to get positive rep enough to get uber and meet other requirements.

Then the sell things in the market place and start the scam. Those accounts they rack up bytes by doing check ins. They transfer bytes to their other accounts that they use and won't get banned. Then let their newly created account get banned. They scam people and then use that money to cycle thru new accounts. They get a new residential ip come back open up a new account act like a new member. Then get their positive rep and upgrade their account farm bytes and then transfer to their main accounts the bytes. Over time they can then sell those bytes.

They repeat and keep making accounts and keep cycling thru this.

new members are easy to notice. Scammers are easy to notice based on their first few posts and threads.

Everyone here told me you're brand new never been on the website.

Yet. you just admitted you had an account back in 2013 but refuse to tell us what the name of it is. Yet, your original post you stated you're brand new tot he forums. You only admitted to having an account after the site owner asked. It's a common signature of a scammer.

can you get off my post bro, you are a very negative speaking person. how am I suppose to remember a random login from 10 years ago.
