Thread: How to make a realistic insta

Jack Daniels™ - August 29, 2023, 7:45 am

I'm being repeatedly asked for my instagram as some kind of verification from guys now. I'm going to make a fake insta, but how can I make it realistic? Is the only way to make a bunch of fake accounts to like/comment etc? Buying followers would look too sus and would be no likes on the pics or comments. Anyone done a fake insta before?

Hey , U can buy followers , and likes and comments as well, it's cheap. U don't need a fake accounts to like and comment. But there's one thing, u can't post 10 pics in 1 day , that's will not look realistic for sure. So u need 2-3 weeks to post often , buy like and comments on posts, and you'll be fine. I sent u pm with website I'm using for likes , followers and comments ?

Make it look like a real person. "Verification" photos have literally always been an issue for your all BECAUSE it comes off fake every time.

Find a model or something that's willing to just take regular ass pictures. "Gee Whiz this 8k image of her holding up a carrot and sticking her tongue out really makes me believe this is a real human being"

YEASH

And for the love of all that is holy don't BUY the followers or comments - you're just adding to the fakeness of it all. Take time to build a profile.

Lazy = Less $ or none

This is it right here. It takes some time to really make the profile look real. What I used to do is pick 1-2 subjects and go all in on posts about them. For example, food and dogs. Those are 2 of the evergreen topics on Instagram.

I would go on Twitter and "borrow" some food and dog pictures. Then I would post once or twice a day while also liking and commenting on other food and dog posts. Like/comment then post. That will get you real, organic followers. I would also add in a few selfies just to break up the food and dog posts. I also had real female friends add the account and like and post comments on my pics.

The extra spin I put on this was a second account that was private. That was the one with some fake followers. So if anyone ever asked why I didn't have more pics of me, I would tell them that those pics were on my personal Instagram and that was just for my friends. I would also say "Maybe once I get to know you (meaning after you spent a lot of money), I'll add you to that one". That gives them an incentive to make you happy by spending money.

It all depends, I know someone that don't post pics just stories but they have 50K+ real followers by doing Sfs with bigger ig pages.
