

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: I am curious to learn about Steam account hijacking/phishing

lizardsarecool - September 3, 2023, 5:43 am

Hey everybody,

This is aim towards anybody who might have experience in Steam account hijacking and phishing. I am constantly seeing people on Steam forums complaining about being hacked and losing their items. I am curious to learn about doing this and I would love to help partake in anybody's devious schemes. Feel free to PM me! :)

DramaKing - September 3, 2023, 7:37 pm

I think that compromising users' email or phone would be required to successfully take over a Steam account.

marcus918211 - September 5, 2023, 5:06 am

Optionally the user has the steam authenticator activated, that will complicate the process.

National Crime Agency UK - September 5, 2023, 5:33 am

Way to get yourself noticed! Unless you have permission from all parties concerned hacking into someone's steam account is illegal!

Stay on the right side of the law, visit cyberchoices.uk to find more information.

osn64698 - September 5, 2023, 7:29 am

(Sep 5, 2023 05:32 AM)Dyne Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) There is a lot of demand for ethical hackers in the cyber security industry so we would suggest that route. Build your skills in a legal way and avoid heading down a cyber crime pathway.

Visit cyberchoices.uk to find more information and resources where you can develop your skills.

Lmao..... We are obviously talking hypothetically here.

NOBODY HERE IS HACKA