Jadzia - September 17, 2023, 8:09 pm

I have a favorite cup for hot coffee and favorite tumbler for iced coffee and I always have one or the other. I'm sipping coffee throughout the day. That being said....I make time to get the cup and tumbler washed (everyday). There's always a way to make time.

? I'm not denying that it'll build your immune system. I have a nephew who is nasty af. Couple of feet high at least of rotten garbage in his room with only 2-4 sq ft of floor visible. Along the wall the garbage was 3-4ft high. You walk in and on his top bunk there is a take out plate with a t-bone bone petrified so much the roaches can't even eat it. He rarely gets sick. I personally prefer exercising and taking vitamins to stay healthy. I played in dirt as a kid so my immune system is solid too....just not with rats and snakes sharing my living space lol. I wish I was joking but once they helped him clean out his room and they found a snake skin and 2 different rats nests with 8 babies total. He could easily qualify to be on an episode of Hoarders. They're pretty much gonna need to completely rebuild the floor. I think they managed to get about 70% of the garbage out and now it's back the way it was again a few months later.

Just gross. I wash my favorite mug after every use. I don't want the taste of my last drink in there.

Michael - September 18, 2023, 12:11 am

Lol, I've never heard this before.

Like others are saying, I hope you really clean your dirty mug at least once a day haha.
Good luck OP.

WebArt - September 18, 2023, 12:42 am i dont drink coffee or tea. so there is no chance for me to wash my coffee mug droidman - September 19, 2023, 4:50 am i wash everything even if it is just to drink water

BiNBo - September 19, 2023, 6:01 am

I drink 3-5 cups of coffee a day, I have about 3 mugs I rotate through, and I wash the one I used every day before I leave the office.

OP I will personally mail you dish soap and a sponge at no charge. However, only on the condition that you please start washing that mug after each use.

Haven't washed my favorite mug for years.
Got a servant who does it for me while I sleep: called dishwasher.

Mac Miller - September 19, 2023, 7:32 am

Yeah my coffee mug gets a rinse every day but it aint getting washed with soap that's for sure

Vibe - September 19, 2023, 7:54 am

I only use the same mug if it's only been a short time since I finished it then I still rinse it quick, I wouldn't use after coming home from work or the next day though.

hayesh - September 19, 2023, 11:25 am when i said i dont wash it in a month,i mean with soap and water i rinse the cup everyday though.

Coconwoods - September 20, 2023, 3:30 pm

? same here but I love it and all of its stains

sebahorbacz - September 21, 2023, 7:51 am

I clean my mug right after drinking my coffee/tea, if you leave it for couple days - the new civilization will start to show up. Once in a month - no way you do it.

Had no clue this topic would be so debatable. I keep my coffee cups for atleast 2-3 days. I'm also a lazy prick and no, my immune system is not strong like an ox it's compromised lol.

When he says he washes his favorite mug once a month i think he means, showering

lkog123 - September 23, 2023, 8:51 pm

Sounds like when I clean my son's room out. It's always the same 2 days later. ? Not nearly as bad as your nephew though. This story makes me feel better about how bad things have sometimes got for us. I'm a terrible house keeper and worse I'm female but I have a cleaner come in once a month so it's not that bad.

That's fucking horrible about the rats though. I can't stand them. They were in my attic but we did finally get them out.

Alpha Geek - September 26, 2023, 8:41 am

I have a few favorite coffee mugs, but the longest they go without being washed is the duration of the day I'm using them.

Biggs - September 26, 2023, 9:55 am

This must be a troll right? How can you drink from a cup over and over again a month long without rinsing it at least. I think you like your coffee seasoned. :o

Don't feel bad, I'm horrible at house keeping as well. Super weird apparently, but I just like to do Dishes and sweep and mop the floors ?

Well, I'm not the best either but I help run the family business and then I have my side IT job, caregiver to schizophrenics...I catch up when I can. All you can do is your best.

My brother has a chihuahua and some of those rats are as big as she is. That badass little dog shot off my nephew's bed as a rat was leaping off the top bunk and she caught it mid air!! :O

You'd think your nephew would get sick with rats right in his room.

Exactly...it's amazing that hasn't happened. Definitely the immune system of an ox. ?

You know...if my brother could afford it (which he can't) it would be best to get a storage building and convert it to a separate apartment so that he can make proper repairs to the house. He's worried that section of floor is just gonna rot away. It's disgusting and sad. My brother goes through bad depression because of my nephew. Nephew needs a serious wake up call. He's old enough to get out and work to help.

? I'd just have to burn the house down. I'd sleep in a tent somewhere else before I'd live like that. Spread some critter repellent around it because I can't deal with snakes either.

I wash my favourite coffee mug once a month ... why? What is so difficult about washing that mug? Even if you did it just once a day in the morning, before using it for the day? A little hot water, a touch of dish soap, done. This isn't some difficult or complicated procedure.

And your coffee will taste better too- you won't be drinking parts of yesterday and before's dried dregs. That's nasty.

If you're only washing your mug once a month I don't even want to know how long you go between washing the coffee pot. Oof.

LOUD - October 31, 2023, 1:27 pm

No, not much of a coffee drinker. BUT I do drink over a gallon of water a day out of a Yeti Tumbler and I only clean it thoroughly once a week or so.

Trust - October 31, 2023, 2:03 pm

No, I drink out of disposable coffee cups at work like a true Earth-hater.

Komodo - October 31, 2023, 2:05 pm

Nope.

Like a normal person I clean my dishes after use.

Crowned - October 31, 2023, 3:29 pm

Absolutely not. I wish it every time.

Cooligan - October 31, 2023, 9:07 pm

I absolutely do lol, I feel like every real man does or at least should.

I'll just grab it, rinse it out with water, and fill that bad boy up. I won't do the same with my tea mug though because I use honey in my tea instead of sugar for a much better flavor, and you don't really want a sticky residue from the honey to keep building up over time on the bottom of the mug.
