Thread: What's your internet speed?

Cyam - October 14, 2023, 7:28 am

Ever since I moved out to my own place in the city I could finally get a proper internet :)

This is my current speed:

I'm getting a new plan soon cause I'm also getting a cable tv.

It will be from 1.4gbps to 2gbps speed

Funny thing is both TV and internet will be 48€ which I think is pretty cheap comparing to US or UK for example

Komodo - October 14, 2023, 7:30 am

I guess that speed is possible cause of less people using it but I could be totally wrong. I didn't think those speeds were possible in my country lol but here we are

That seems to be perfect for me. My buddy down the road got the 1000/1000 package and I go over there a lot, and I think after such a speed there's almost no difference. Unless downloading which I hardly do anymore with streaming.

Even if this priority statement is actually a thing, that doesn't change speed. The calculated time to download is simple math and represents the best case scenario already. Your statement about taking priority would just mean you should be closer to that best case scenario than most.

100GB at 500 Mbps is 26 minutes. It's 13 minutes at 1000Mbps (1 gigabit). That's all there is to it. If you're downloading it faster then some sort of caching must be in effect. That's the only thing that makes sense. But it'd also mean the cache is local- bare that in mind.

And that's inclusive of whatever fees or taxes get imposed in the fine print. Metro markets might be see closer to $80, maybe even a little lower. Both my wife and I work from home. We also have two kids. So at any given time there's a dozen devices in some state of active use, plus some ridiculous number beyond that in the background/inactive.

It's less about the speed, and most about the symmetrical connection and capability to cover the bandwidth needs.

True.

Apartments / Society infrastructures are integrated with internal cabling. This allows most ISP to provide FTTH services.

I live in one of those, that is the only reason it is possible to get those speed.

I live in a quite well off area yet I cannot get better connection than 72 Mbit/sec on cable.

I could get a lot faster with a 5G router but that would be twice the price and would involve a lot of trials with different providers to find one with decent upload speed as well.

The giganet provider which is expanding in the surrounding area would only dig to my address if more people would require it which is not the case.

Would love to have giganet but it's in the future for me once our house is ready and we move.
