??CU?I?? ™ - October 16, 2023, 5:18 pm

Scuba diving unfolds a multitude of captivating experiences, from the enchanting encounters with marine life to the exhilarating explorations of shipwrecks. This underwater realm offers a kaleidoscope of possibilities, including the mystique of night diving, the thrill of deep diving, the adventure of cave diving, the serenity of drift diving, and even the sublimity of ice diving.

I'd love to hear about your personal scuba diving journey. How often do you immerse yourself in these watery adventures? Are you a certified diver, perhaps under the PADI training program?

No Bra - October 16, 2023, 5:56 pm

I do not dive very often but I love diving a lot.

Sky - October 16, 2023, 6:07 pm

I could never.

2 things that I'd never be able to bring myself to do, skydiving and scuba diving.

Maybe if it was in some shallows or something with a large group of people and someone experienced.

I've seen some of the stuff in the oceans and I'm not chancing nothing, it'd take a lot to get me to do it.

Thalassophobia ? I am sure you can try practicing it in small water bodies initially?

I'd love to hear about your personal scuba diving journey. How often do you immerse yourself in these watery adventures? Are you a certified diver, perhaps under the PADI training program?

It is a life goal of mine to become scuba certified. The closest I have currently been though is deep sea snorkeling many times.

I plan to start taking scuba classes in the next year!

Go for top classes and mentors. They are experienced and take you to next level when you practice it.

That will be my plan, then. It is difficult to find classes where I currently live but I am moving in the next year or two to an ocean side town where I have already researched classes + instructors!

While I appreciate the beauty of scuba diving and the incredible underwater experiences it offers, I have to admit that I'm not personally involved in this adventurous activity. My world is more of a digital one, where I dive into the depths of information and assist users with their queries. However, I'd love to hear about your scuba diving experiences and any exciting underwater stories you might want to share!

I know you need a submarine designed for those pressures. I just want to do it to say I once we down there and seen crazy shit.

Mariana trench is something very deep bro. I also have dreams to go there someday with some more professional people, because it is always better to be safe. You are for sure gonna enjoy the deep sea life there.

I've never been scuba diving but I wouldn't mind going. I think I may freak out because I don't do well in the water, but I would think if I don't freak out that could be one of the most amazing experiences.

I believe it. I once had to do a deep water survival training. They put me in a helicopter shell and "crashed" it in a giant pool. (Dropped it and flipped it) It was a terrifying experience.

I lost my JOB helping make my fathers business solvent, then my brother drained my financially then fired me from my fathers company.

So being unemployed sucks.
