

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Al Ahli Baptist Hospital Bombing \(Israel or Hamas?\)

banonkiel - October 17, 2023, 5:12 pm

(since you can only have 1 [tw] per post, I would rather just put links)

Both sides are blaming each others, when I heard of the news, I searched and searched and apparently nobody had credible source to back the fact Israeli did it.
All the outlets said "Palestinian source blames ..."

While the Israeli response was this
Glad I took a screenshot because I couldn't find THAT again after Israeli's response became "we blame Hamas", I'm sure it didn't just disappear and I'm just having a hard time finding the articles again

Edit: It's fun it says "The Hamas-Run Health Ministry", they don't even recognize Health Minister as "Palestinian" but as "Hamas-Run" to dehumanize them? I guess.
If that's not biased media then idk what is.

But that could mean anything, right? it could be just a tactical response because they want to deny bombing the hospital while providing the facts to back their claim of not doing so.

- @Israel took to twitter with this tweet
<https://twitter.com/Israel/status/1714378880713203844>

Translation of the on screen-text: "Israeli Air Forces: The Air forces bombed targets that belong to Hezbollah in Lebanon"
Weird "breaking news" to have since I don't believe Israeli Air Forces did any strikes on Lebanon today.

<https://twitter.com/jacksonhinklle/status/1714386960150597780>
I saw this response and I thought it's relevant to add it, it's calling out @Israel for lying and misleading people.
Since the timestamps of the footage don't match the actual bombing timing

- Israeli Spokesperson Hananya Naftali (@HananyaNaftali) tweeted
<https://twitter.com/HananyaNaftali/status/1714346975326330957>

Funny enough, the community note says he earlier tweeted Israeli Air Force DID strike but deleted the tweet.
coincidence? idk but he then made another tweet saying it was false
<https://twitter.com/HananyaNaftali/status/1714400598991261966>

- MSNBC reporter argues Hamas doesn't have the equipment to do such damage from one bomb
<https://twitter.com/FahadAmirN/status/1714420669520486560>

The nail in the coffin for me was this tweet

<https://twitter.com/MarioNawfal/status/1714419377305428295>

Final Notes:

- Sensitive Content in the spoiler -

Spoiler (Click to View)

- Fuck Hamas for starting all this shit.

- Fuck Israel for all the war-crimes the committing and apparently nobody is stopping them anytime soon.

Who did? Israel? Hamas? I don't give a fuck, thousands of innocent people are dying and apparently little to no people care.

Undead - October 18, 2023, 5:12 am

Ofcourse this was done by the Israhell. If the Palestinians had access to these kind of weapons, Israelis would be shitting in their beds.

Sholi - October 18, 2023, 7:27 am

https://www.instagram.com/reel/Cygs_jchvpy/?igshid=MzRIODBiNWFIZA==

It's a US JDAM. Nothing a Palestinian resistance group has in its arsenal. You've seen their fireworks, they barely make a dent in buildings. This is just sad, there is nowhere for civilians to be safe. They can't eat, drink, shit, piss or even be treated. This is crazy, people from 2100 will be learning about this in school books.

Disease - October 18, 2023, 5:02 pm

Waiting on actual third party insight into concluding anything. Preliminary third party reviews are finding a lot of reason to believe this is a failed Hamas missile. There's also credible doubt rising now about the casualty count, given how superficial the damage actually appears to be.

Neither side are going to take responsibility for this. Israel won't as then it'd be admittance they either targeted a civilian hospital or their missile missed an otherwise valid target and hit there instead. Hamas won't, as it's admittance to their incompetency and shoddy equipment; nothing looks worse than friendly fire, especially when the friendly target is a civilian hospital.

banonkiel - October 18, 2023, 5:12 pm

(Oct 18, 2023 05:02 PM)Disease Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Waiting on actual third party insight into concluding anything. Preliminary third party reviews are finding a lot of reason to believe this is a failed Hamas missile. There's also credible doubt rising now about the casualty count, given how superficial the damage actually appears to be.

Neither side are going to take responsibility for this. Israel won't as then it'd be admittance they either targeted a civilian hospital or their missile missed an otherwise valid target and hit there instead. Hamas won't, as it's admittance to their incompetency and shoddy equipment; nothing looks worse than friendly fire, especially when the friendly target is a civilian hospital.

I'm interested in the way Israel responded to this so far. "We are investigating"

The odds of a rocket to fail and land on a hospital are astronomical, not eliminating anything but just saying.

The likely-hood that Israel intentionally targeted a hospital is very hard to believe as well.

yet, I need to mention some of their official sources confirmed attacking the hospital first and justified it as "targeting Hamas officials" then all of those statements were pulled back and replaced with "we mistakenly" or "we followed Reuters articles"

Disease - October 18, 2023, 5:20 pm

(Oct 18, 2023 05:12 PM)banonkiel Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'm interested in the way Israel responded to this so far. "We are investigating"

The odds of a rocket to fail and land on a hospital are astronomical, not eliminating anything but just saying.

The likely-hood that Israel intentionally targeted a hospital is very hard to believe as well.

yet, I need to mention some of their official sources confirmed attacking the hospital first and justified it as "targeting Hamas officials" then all of those statements were pulled back and replaced with "we mistakenly" or "we followed Reuters articles"

When you get as specific as "fail and hit near a hospital" then yes, a failed missile doing that is astronomically long. But a Hamas missile failing in general? Not at all astronomical. Reports from 2022 showed a staggering number of Hamas rockets fell short and struck within Gaza. Once you consider that, the chance a target like a hospital could be hit accidentally increases substantially.

Also, it doesn't appear that the hospital itself was struck. From what I can tell, it struck the road or parking lot around the hospital, destroyed a number of cars, blew out windows, and just caused superficial building damage in general. I would generally think Israel's firing rockets with higher precision than that. And given it's unlikely the ordinance hit its target no matter who fired it, the likelihood that it was a mistake on either side is significant.

banonkiel - October 18, 2023, 5:33 pm

(Oct 18, 2023 05:20 PM)Disease Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) When you get as specific as "fail and hit near a hospital" then yes, a failed missile doing that is astronomically long. But a Hamas missile failing in general? Not at all astronomical. Reports from 2022 showed a staggering number of Hamas rockets fell short and struck within Gaza. Once you consider that, the chance a target like a hospital could be hit accidentally increases substantially.

Also, it doesn't appear that the hospital itself was struck. From what I can tell, it struck the road or parking lot around the hospital, destroyed a number of cars, blew out windows, and just caused superficial building damage in general. I would generally think Israel's firing rockets with higher precision than that. And given it's unlikely the ordinance hit its target no matter who fired it, the likelihood that it was a mistake on either side is significant.

Too many variables to have a clear image right now.

One thing is certain, can't imagine the feeling of anyone who had loved ones in that hospital. I can only imagine the pain and suffering they are going through and the feeling that we can do nothing to help them is infuriating.

Prepper - October 20, 2023, 3:45 pm

So from what I been reading up on since this happened and from video footage, etc it does seem like this was not a Hamas strike, it is likely Israeli.

Also Israel is telling the director of the Al-Quds hospital to evacuate or bear all the consequences and is threatening to bomb it. This hospital has a large amount of women and children seeking shelter.

Attacking hospitals and schools is unacceptable.

banonkiel - October 20, 2023, 5:53 pm

(Oct 20, 2023 03:45 PM)Prepper Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) So from what I been reading up on since this happened and from video footage, etc it does seem like this was not a Hamas strike, it is likely Israeli.

Also Israel is telling the director of the Al-Quds hospital to evacuate or bear all the consequences and is threatening to bomb it. This hospital has a large amount of women and children seeking shelter.

Attacking hospitals and schools is unacceptable.

I have heard about this from my friends and I think read about it once or twice, all I can think is "can someone really be that dumb?"

One of my friends even mentioned they warned the hospital in terms like "evacuate unless you want to end up like the other hospital that got bombed"

Nothing confirmed, but I wonder if I can find couple of sources here or there.

If that's true, then we should applaud to the media on how well they are controlling the narrative and how well they brain-washed the people.

Prepper - October 20, 2023, 6:15 pm

(Oct 20, 2023 05:53 PM)banonkiel Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I have heard about this from my friends and I think read about it once or twice, all I can think is "can someone really be that dumb?"

One of my friends even mentioned they warned the hospital in terms like "evacuate unless you want to end up like the other hospital that got bombed"

Nothing confirmed, but I wonder if I can find couple of sources here or there.

If that's true, then we should applaud to the media on how well they are controlling the narrative and how well they brain-washed the people.

There was already strikes near the hospital the other day.

Israel also struck a greek orthodox church in Gaza as well and at least 18 are dead so far, the church was sheltering hundreds of innocent women, children and elderly.

I originally came out supporting Israel's right to defend itself when Hamas attacked, and yes innocent people will die that is part of war. But to intentionally strike hospitals, churches, mosques and other places where innocent people are sheltering is not acceptable and I cannot support that.

Israeli president already suggested there is no innocent civilians in Gaza suggesting that they are all targets, this is unacceptable.

Disease - October 20, 2023, 6:17 pm

(Oct 20, 2023 03:45 PM)Prepper Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) So from what I been reading up on since this happened and from video footage, etc it does seem like this was not a Hamas strike, it is likely Israeli.

I don't know, everything I'm seeing is still wildly inconclusive. Al Jazeera is calling out Israel on their inconsistencies, which is questionable. French intelligence is claiming they see evidence that points towards it being Hamas. Independent think tanks reviewing footage are either not commenting due to lack of evidence, or centering on the idea that the damage wasn't even an explosion caused by a warhead, but the burning of rocket fuel (without comment on who's rocket it is).

Regardless of who fired the rocket, one thing seems more and more clear- it very likely wasn't a warhead explosion based on the damage (as some think tanks have come out and claimed). Which means the death toll Hamas is claiming is very, very likely fictional too. Which side screwed up and caused damage to this hospital is in the air. But I don't think for a second the casualties caused by this are even remotely what Hamas is claiming it to be.

banonkiel - October 20, 2023, 6:20 pm

(Oct 20, 2023 06:15 PM)Prepper Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Israeli president already suggested there is no innocent civilians in Gaza suggesting that they are all targets, this is unacceptable.

The narrative has already been decided.

Like literally in the first post you will find a screenshot saying "Hamas-run Minister of Health", they are trying so so so hard to make it like everyone in Gaza is part of Hamas so that nobody will sympathize with them, and even with the effort of a lot of people worldwide to expose the lies and propaganda, a lot of people literally read the news and think "Israel was hit by a terrorist attack and now they are fighting back, good for them"

I feel so sorry for the Palestinians, they stood no chance.

On a positive note though, I heard that the global aid that was stationed in Egypt is finally being allowed into Gaza.

imo that's very little participation from the world to help Gaza but it's something.

arroncrascall - October 21, 2023, 4:22 am rrrr the GOD of peace ALLAH the podophile God of war

Berrydude - October 21, 2023, 4:52 pm

It was an american rocket, israel even admitted they did it a few minutes after it happened, then deleted all their statements when they decided it would look really bad to bomb a hospital and kill hundreds of innocents, and changed their strategy to lying and saying hamas bombed their own hospital. Even though israel confirms they bomb hospitals all the time, for some reason they just didnt bomb this one supposedly.

Prepper - October 21, 2023, 5:02 pm

(Oct 21, 2023 04:52 PM)Berrydude Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) It was an american rocket, israel even admitted they did it a few minutes after it happened, then deleted all their statements when they decided it would look really bad to bomb a hospital and kill hundreds of innocents, and changed their strategy to lying and saying hamas bombed their own hospital. Even though israel confirms they bomb hospitals all the time, for some reason they just didnt bomb this one supposedly.

The USA did not fire a rocket so you need to be careful without you word that otherwise it ends up causing more confusion. Israel has American made rockets, but it would still be an Israeli rocket if they fired it.

I did see those supposed statements but only in screenshot form, obviously there is no way to verify with 100% certainty those were genuine statements due to only being screen shots but it still adds on to the various other evidences suggesting it was an Israeli rocket.

Berrydude - October 22, 2023, 1:39 pm

(Oct 21, 2023 05:02 PM)Prepper Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) The USA did not fire a rocket so you need to be careful without you word that otherwise it ends up causing more confusion. Israel has American made rockets, but it would still be an Israeli rocket if they fired it.

I did see those supposed statements but only in screenshot form, obviously there is no way to verify with 100% certainty those were genuine statements due to only being screen shots but it still adds on to the various other evidences suggesting it was an Israeli rocket.

Yes israel fired it not america, i'm saying its an american rocket as in manufactured by an american company, and sent to israel, so only israel would posses it.

For the tweet, this is the guy who posted it, admitting that he posted it <https://twitter.com/HananyaNaftali/status/1714400598991261966>
It was a real tweet, i remember seeing it myself.

Anyway, israel targets civilians and civilian infrastructure all the time, no one would dispute this, they were initially proud of hitting the hospital, then realized the scale of the carnage, and have started lying and blaming it on a hamas rocket that misfired.

I am an American who knows there is no American interest in supporting israel, but the American government and media are owned by zionist jews who exert their influence to make my country do their bidding for decades and decades. Regardless of the land dispute and who should rightfully occupy the land, the Israeli military is morally repugnant and there is no comparison in the modern world to what they do.

dikkejerry - October 23, 2023, 1:09 am

I heard some rumors that Israel knew that hamas was planning attack on this festival.

But they choose to ignore this information.

Why u may be asking?

Now they had something to back them up to fully go all in on gaza.

Also hate that most media is Pro Israel.

But if you think of it.

Most media was bought by Zionist.

Allot of country's are funded by zionist people.

If you go back to WWII even churchill was funded by zionist people.

I can give you a docu on telegram. Its called: Europa the last battle.

Its around 9/10 hours long.

This docu will give you more info on why things like today are happening.

But be prepared its a very harsh and cruell docu but most important very true docu.

idk if im allowed to post links.

so if you want u can dm me for it.

DarkSerenity - November 6, 2023, 12:02 am

It is obvious that Israel has people in most countries with critical positions not sure if they're blackmailing their governments or what it just doesn't make sense how none of the neighbor countries are not even trying to help at all.

Think about it, why would Biden say If Israel didn't exist we would have invented one?, why would he pay them 100+ billions of dollars in a matter of days when people are already suffering there from taxes, health care and other stuff not to mention that it is in debt of 33 trillions and increasing every day? Same goes to Arab neighboring countries why would they stay silent for 29 days?

The way Israel is always acting innocent and blaming Hamas is very suspicious and lame I don't understand how people are believing this bullshit.

what they're doing collective punishment, they're killing innocent people, Imagine your loved ones living somewhere and suddenly you are unable to communicate with them, they have no food or water or electricity, someone is bombing their homes, they have no freedom and cannot leave the country nor fight nor do anything but run in the streets, only looking at corpses around them, sounds of explosions day and night until the moment they die, it is very sad...

The media is still controlled by supporters of Israel, all social media platforms are deleting, suspending and hiding most of the facts that are happening there, except X "former Twitter" and Telegram if you find the right groups to join.

They're currently destroying all schools, hospitals, churches, mosques, where most people are gathering since they no longer have homes or shelters...

Lately there are talks that they're announcing the launching a nuclear missile in the middle of Gaza which is extremely evil and inhuman and illegal.

People should educate themselves with what is really happening and should put themselves in their shoes...

I'm hating that the world is silent and no one is doing anything...