Do you believe in time machine ? Will you go back in past or travel in future? And what will you do after going in past or future?

This is going to be an good discussion as you can go in past and do good investments, or you can go in future and know the results of good investments and come back to invest in present. There are a lot of more possibilities. Share your thoughts over it.

Time machines are fascinating, but they seem more like science fiction. If I could time travel, I'd visit both the past and future. As for what I'd do, I'd invest in Amazon Inc., the stock that grew the most in world history (IIRC).

I mean I believe black holes are amazing and unexplored and I think that they are proof via hawking radiation that they are very plausibly Einstein-Rosenbridges. Either a teleportation/hyper space functionality or a time traveling functionality. Sadly my generation will not get to explore the stars Z and Alpha will.

Elon isn't the savior of space travel.

NASA continues to grow and explore, the issue is our politicians are selling us out for their own wealth and greed and we the people choose to live like sheep and not like the apex predators we really are.

Elon Musk is an entrepreneur who, driven by his business goals, could ultimately pave the way for advancements in space travel. However, it's important to acknowledge that NASA also plays a vital role in this endeavor and should focus on improving its space exploration efforts.

That's the issue ELON has an amazing publicist in that fact that people believe he acts benevolently he doesn't.

I point you to the fact he has 10+ children none of which he sees, raises or cares about.

I point you to Bill & Melinda Gates and their foundation which has used more money for humanitarian causes than any billionaire ever has including Elon.

Remember Elon said prove to me 5 billion dollars can be used to solve world hunger and I'll give it to you.

They did and he still backed out.

He's a fraud and not someone to be idolized.

when you go back in time and let's say change history... once you do this you make a time warp bubble.

Which means the original past exists still but you not created a bubble to also have a new past side by side but they both exists

Believe in time machines? I don't know, sounds like sci-fi bollocks to me. But, hypothetically, if I had a shot? Hell yeah, I'd go back, not for investments or stuff like that, but maybe to relive some badass moments or fix a few mistakes. As for the future, I'd be tempted just to see if we ever make those flying cars a reality or if AI has taken over everything. But, time travel's tricky, right? One small change and bam! Butterfly effect. Imagine going back, doing something stupid, and returning to a world where keyboards never existed.

It would be a real fun if you do it.

It could be possible in upcoming generations(still highly unlikely).

I 100% would live my life out until I'm 30. Then hit the reset button and go back to 20 years old to make better investments. I'm not in a bad position now, I just passed up so many great opportunities and could be doing better.

Definitely gonna go back and forward. Gotta go back to get good investments going, help friends and family avoid certain fates, and then go to the future to see how things turn out, and so I can then go back and prevent other fates from occurring.

Whenever I read some fiction/fantasy story, I always throw out all my common sense so yeah. You can say that during those periods, I do believe in such things as Time Machine.

If there a misfortunate things that have happened to me, I wish the Time Machine did exist and would like to undo my mistakes.

I have some selfish ones I'd like to do, like go back to see the birth of man, the dinosaurs, revolutions, etc, but I'd mostly go just to protect and look out for loved ones through past action.

I would like to go in future and know the good investment options and comeback to my present and invest. This way it will not make any major changes to the time span which changing past can do.

Ohh. So you're also concerned with the consequences huh? Brilliant! I really didn't think about paradoxes today.

So thoughtful of you. Well, you just hope I don't get my hands first 'cause I might fucked up the timeline with my silliness. ?

Not sure what there is to believe in- right now it's just not a thing, haha. Current science does state that time travel is possible, but not in the sense of a machine just taking you to a point in the past or the future. Rather, it's possible for forward movement only, and only if you can achieve speeds near the speed of light. If you could accomplish such speeds, your body would age much, much slower than those on Earth. So if you were to stay in movement at such speeds for 100 years, you could conceivably return to Earth and only have aged a fraction of that time. Aka, you'd have effectively traveled into the future in a state similar to that from which you began.

This phenomenon actually occurs even at speeds much less than the speed of light. But to actually make use of the effect to a significant degree, you'd really need that extraordinary speed.

Science aside, if I could just freely go to another point in time, I think I'd go into the future to see how my kids turn out- especially how their kids / grandkids turn out if they have them. Would be really interesting to just see how my lineage carries on.

If there was a time machine I would to back 2009 and but a ton of BTC for memecoin prizes after that travel to the time BTC where 60k each, and just relax from there on.

Hungry4Knowledge - October 23, 2023, 12:09 pm

According to Brian Cox the possibility of time travel is real but only forward. Traveling to the past is impossible even theoretically.

To the future I wouldn't wanna go....I'm worried I wouldn't like what I would find...

To be fair, I'd be nice to have a time machine, but it some sense if we were to change the past, some things would be completely different in the present time.

If you change past, it would change your present, But if you know future you can change your present and do success without disturbing the timeline.

(I would take the future option)

That's quite a smart way to look at it + you wouldn't really make mistakes as you already know the outcomes/the future of it.
