Thread: Radix - Should I take the L ?

Hey fellow crypto enthusiasts,

I wanted to share my recent experience and thoughts regarding my investment in Radix, as well as my consideration of moving my assets to Cardano.

I initially invested in Radix with high hopes. The project seemed promising, with innovative technology and the potential to revolutionize the decentralized finance (DeFi) space. However, as time went on, I noticed some concerning signs that made me question my faith in the project.

-Delays and Uncertainty: Radix faced significant delays in delivering its technology and promises. The lack of clear timelines and shifting roadmaps left me feeling uncertain about the project's future.

-Lack of Development Progress: The crypto world is fast-paced, and projects need to continuously evolve to stay competitive. Unfortunately, I didn't see Radix making significant strides in terms of development and adoption.

At that time Babylon was going to be the future, and when it came out the price would easily be at $1. It's been 1 month and the radix is worth $0.04

The bull market is almost here and I see Cardano making an x10 much more easily than Radix.

I have at least 5 figures invested in radix.

What is your opinion, should I take the "L" ?

The tech is promising, but my faith in the team is at an all time low. I have no idea what their marketing strategy is, if they even have one but it looks like they're just going to rely on the community as most of us are now well underwater. We either market ourselves or take the L.

I'm gonna wait a little while longer, Babylon has only just launched and there's still some solid teams developing on the network, but I'm not buying their bullshit podcasts shilling other projects anymore. They either pull their act together or a lot of people are just gonna jump ship, even the GCs are losing faith.

Why do you see Cardano making a 10x from here?

I'm not saying it will happen. I'm comparing the all time high of the two and I believe that Cardano more easily surpasses the all time high than Radix.

Have you looked at the ATH of the shitcoins from the ICO 2017 graveyard?

Ironically this would be the worst time to rotate if you think a bull market is coming and you think it won't die

Bitcoin or bust, get out all sh*tcoins while you can.

If Bitcoin goes down you can pretty much guarantee all sh*tcoins will go down too, but if sh*tcoin goes down, Bitcoin can and always has still gone up.

No safer crypto to put than Bitcoin, and Bitcoin just needs to hit $350k for a 10x, many think its possible, some even think with inflation, a 100x to $3.5M is possible. But of course by then big mac will cost $100 lol

It's more likely than "possible" in my completely unexperienced opinion.

All these projects pushing ambitious marketing with no real sustenance.. Got to keep up that "yield" somehow.

But OT - I don't know much about Radix, just make sure you're okay with losing it all if it were to happen.. That's the only mentality I can approach low mcap alts with.
