

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: What were your LONG COVID symptoms.

The Pact - November 22, 2023, 5:09 pm

What were your LONG COVID symptoms. Did you have mild Covid to start. How long after you got Covid did your Long Covid symptoms appear?

Truth - November 22, 2023, 9:10 pm

crazy thing is I've never tested positive for covid, been around many people who did though, a little surprised even though its not that serious for most people.

never forget its real name, the Wuhan virus

Syndicate - November 22, 2023, 11:59 pm

One of my long term covid affects is that I've had a cough for almost 2 months now unfortunately. I don't know how to get rid of it and the doctor(s) haven't had a solution yet.

EDIT: Also my mechanic's long term side affect was that he lost his taste for about 6 months. He could only taste spicy foods.

Eran - November 24, 2023, 5:21 am

I was just constantly getting winded up easily about 2-3 months after I tested negative, thats about it.

Mnemonic - November 24, 2023, 5:24 am

Theres nothing like "long covid" there's only permanent fucked up immunity caused by vaccines. People don't even know how to remove the mRNA shit from your system, it duplicates itself more and more the each day and second in your body.

Biggs - November 24, 2023, 5:36 am

None, I had covid twice and I'm glad I recovered without any symptoms left. The first time I had it I was like sick for two days and after that I restored. The second time I had it I didn't even feel like I had it.

perm - November 24, 2023, 8:35 am

I'm not sure if I'm affected by this. Hard to tell.

roadman69 - November 25, 2023, 6:51 am

I personally don't believe long covid exists

The Pact - November 25, 2023, 8:08 pm

(Nov 24, 2023 06:21 AM)Eran Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I was just constantly getting winded up easily about 2-3 months after I tested negative, thats about it.

What do you mean "winded up," do you mean you had trouble breathing?

HexD - November 30, 2023, 2:39 pm

Less than a week. Basically like any other flu.

Brasil - December 1, 2023, 4:53 am stop talking about covid, I'm not locking down again and want to go to Brasil. Covid doesn't exist. The psyop is over. Slava ukrainy blah blah blah yeah yeah yeah I hate Russia.

Eran - December 3, 2023, 2:24 am

(Nov 25, 2023 09:08 PM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) What do you mean "winded up," do you mean you had trouble breathing?

Yeah, getting up to my apartment at the third floor was a challenge. Walking my dog was the most physical activity I have gotten done in the day. It sucked not being able to exercise as much as I'd want and losing a good amount of gains.

The Pact - December 3, 2023, 5:46 am

(Nov 30, 2023 03:39 PM)Hexar Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Less than a week. Basically like any other flu. We aren't talking about Covid. We're talking about LONG COVID.

(Dec 3, 2023 03:24 AM)Eran Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Yeah, getting up to my apartment at the third floor was a challenge. Walking my dog was the most physical activity I have gotten done in the day. It sucked not being able to exercise as much as I'd want and losing a good amount of gains.

How old are you. I'm worried my son maybe has this.

Advoke - December 3, 2023, 11:02 am

I guess the most annoying symptom for me was anxiety and boredom.

Escapism - December 11, 2023, 1:24 am

Respiratory issues. I copped COVID and my lungs almost failed on me. About two months later I caught a lung infection. Whether it's because of the COVID I don't know but I've never had issues like that before in my life so I can only assume.

I'm disappointed because I had to take the vaccination beforehand and that ruined me too. Personally, I think I'd have done better without it.

gangushbo - December 11, 2023, 8:33 am

Loss of taste. Everything i ate or drunk tasted like burnt rubber.

Lor?d - December 11, 2023, 8:41 am

My wife thinks I'm crazy but ever since I had covid ages ago most things just don't taste the same. My palette has changed entirely, things I used to absolutely love to eat taste like utter garbage now.

Jamika - December 11, 2023, 10:15 am

Actually it was not very bad, thanx allah, but i had a long time till my voice returned and that bad cough relief

MavenGradle - December 11, 2023, 10:19 am

(Dec 1, 2023 05:53 AM)Brasil Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) stop talking about covid, I'm not locking down again and want to go to Brasil. Covid doesn't exist. The psyop is over. Slava ukrainy blah blah blah yeah yeah yeah I hate Russia.

(Nov 25, 2023 07:51 AM)roadman69 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I personally don't believe long covid exists
You guys will live long lives.
(/s)

Syndicate - December 11, 2023, 10:32 am

(Dec 11, 2023 09:41 AM)Lor?d Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) My wife thinks I'm crazy but ever since I had covid ages ago most things just don't taste the same. My palette has changed entirely, things I used to absolutely love to eat taste like utter garbage now.

You're absolutely not crazy. My girlfriend got covid over a month ago and she still can't taste or smell anything really. Maybe once in a while she'll catch a whiff of something out of nowhere but it's completely random

The Pact - February 7, 2025, 12:19 am

(Nov 22, 2023 10:10 PM)Truth Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) crazy thing is I've never tested positive for covid, been around many people who did though, a little surprised even though its not that serious for most people.

never forget its real name, the Wuhan virus
I never have tested positive for Covid either. Somebody I know has Long Covid is why I made the thread.

The Pact - February 7, 2025, 1:33 am

(Feb 7, 2025 01:36 AM)Lowkey Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Mild brain damage from being around the people who claimed to have long covid symptoms.

LMAO. I've never had Covid, or I had it so mild in August 2020 that it barely bothered me.

There is a woman in my life that is kind of a pain in my life who claims to have long Covid. This is not a romance thing I'm a heterosexual woman, but anyway she has Long Covid.

diablospartan - February 7, 2025, 3:16 am

Well the first night was horrible for me as i had big fever and cannot sleep all night but not only that i cannot stay on just one side more than 5 minutes because of fever

Don Cezar - February 7, 2025, 8:47 pm

A family member that had covid swears yogurt tastes like perfume. Started right when they were going through it, lasted even years later. Went from yogurt fan to gagging every time they smell it in a matter of days. I don't know why or how, but it happened

The Pact - February 7, 2025, 9:16 pm

(Feb 7, 2025 09:47 PM)Don Cezar Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) A family member that had covid swears yogurt tastes like perfume. Started right when they were going through it, lasted even years later. Went from yogurt fan to gagging every time they smell it in a matter of days. I don't know why or how, but it happened

I don't want to get Covid. I think I'll just be a hermit then.

? sentient ? - February 22, 2025, 10:36 pm

Never had COVID personally.

When my grandparents supposedly had COVID I brough them fresh fruit, groceries and love because no one else dared coming close. This happened after they got the juice, they were worried about me for not having it but I kept a strong mind and knew nothing would happen to me if I trusted the process.

I also had a separate family member die of old age and allegedly he had COVID, but he was dealing with cardiac failure and a bad urinary e-coli infection and had been on antibiotics too. It was miserable by the end, and ofc I was also there and could witness the respiratory failure, it's scary, but also I think context is everything. There's other things that are known to lead to fluid accumulation in the lungs, and even if it wasn't for respiratory failure, we're sure that something else would have gotten him that winter.

To this date I'm not 100% sure whether it's real or not, and if it is, I'm not sure whether it can be transferred from person to person, given the family clusters, it does seem plausible that it could be food or water borne illness. Given all the hysteria, it also seems plausible to me that it was all in fact psychosomatic. I've personally seen psychosomatic sabotage leading to fever and ILI before. I can't explain why my close family cluster was unable to contract it from all the times we intentionally came in contact with it otherwise, but we knew it wouldn't affect us and it really didn't.

The Pact - February 23, 2025, 12:06 am

(Feb 22, 2025 11:36 PM)? sentient ? Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Never had COVID personally.

When my grandparents supposedly had COVID I brought them fresh fruit, groceries and love because no one else dared coming close. This happened after they got the juice, they were worried about me for not having it but I kept a strong mind and knew nothing would happen to me if I trusted the process.

I also had a separate family member die of old age and allegedly he had COVID, but he was dealing with cardiac failure and a bad urinary e-coli infection and had been on antibiotics too. It was miserable by the end, and ofc I was also there and could witness the respiratory failure, it's scary, but also I think context is everything. There's other things that are known to lead to fluid accumulation in the lungs, and even if it wasn't for respiratory failure, we're sure that something else would have gotten him that winter.

To this date I'm not 100% sure whether it's real or not, and if it is, I'm not sure whether it can be transferred from person to person, given the family clusters, it does seem plausible that it could be food or water borne illness. Given all the hysteria, it also seems plausible to me that it was all in fact psychosomatic. I've personally seen psychosomatic sabotage leading to fever and ILI before. I can't explain why my close family cluster was unable to contract it from all the times we intentionally came in contact with it otherwise, but we knew it wouldn't affect us and it really didn't.

My son has had it three times and I never got it. I haven't had Covid.

Omniscient - February 23, 2025, 11:23 am

(Feb 23, 2025 01:06 AM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) My son has had it three times and I never got it. I haven't had Covid.

You most likely did except you experienced no symptoms. Covid was super contagious. Not everyone has a weak immune system that got triggered by Covid.

As for Long-Covid, I believe it's real. I have a Super-MAGA friend no vaccine that experienced it for 2+ years. He's barely getting out of it now. The research I did basically just shows that the spike protein does it's gain-of-function job of being hard to get rid of and some people it sticks around in the bloodstream for years. My buddy actually saw my wife in her clinic for some alternative treatments that actually did help him recover and get past the worst of it. Other than the long-covid, he's the picture of health. Eats well, works out regularly, in very good shape actually. So after knowing his story, I believe it's real.

The Pact - February 23, 2025, 9:40 pm

(Feb 23, 2025 12:23 PM)Omniscient Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) You most likely did except you experienced no symptoms. Covid was super contagious. Not everyone has a weak immune system that got triggered by Covid.

As for Long-Covid, I believe it's real. I have a Super-MAGA friend no vaccine that experienced it for 2+ years. He's barely getting out of it now. The research I did basically just shows that the spike protein does it's gain-of-function job of being hard to get rid of and some people it sticks around in the bloodstream for years. My buddy actually saw my wife in her clinic for some alternative treatments that actually did help him recover and get past the worst of it. Other than the long-covid, he's the picture of health. Eats well, works out regularly, in very good shape actually. So after knowing his story, I believe it's real.

Yeah I made this thread because someone who has been very caring towards my son had it. I think she's finally over it now. She had to drop back to part time teaching instead of full time for a while because of it I think. She took the vaccine three times before she got Covid I think. And she had to be allowed to teach at a special school with some disabled kids with very weak immune systems, so I think she followed every rule, but still caught it.