

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Anyone know which IMEI tracker works,sister was robbed selling phone

PorchHonkee - November 23, 2023, 9:04 pm

She get brand new phones almost every day and has a normal buyer but hes been gone so she put an s23 on marketplace and meets a lady lastnight whos top 2 bills were real and bottom 3 were fake. profile deleted.

ive checked out a couple different IMEI tracker apps but so far all fake.

is there a real one or a way to track??? i have all the sets of numbers from the box. Thank you

Charlie Sheen - November 23, 2023, 9:54 pm

Nah you won't be able to find any real ones. Report it to the police.

PorchHonkee - November 23, 2023, 11:10 pm

nah, cops are a no go for a couple differemt reasons

AshleyUK - November 24, 2023, 1:09 am

None of them will work, You'd need somebody who works at the carrier...

Syndicate - November 24, 2023, 1:43 am

Only a phone carrier would be able to track the IMEI. That's if it wasn't resold to another person. Otherwise police is your last resort. If that isn't an option then I would take the L and continue on with business. Losses happen, at least she's okay and not harmed

Jake Johnson - November 24, 2023, 5:04 am

As others have already stated, I don't think there are any IMEI trackers that would actually work. You'd have to contact the carrier which I'm sure would be a process to even get them to attempt to do it. Otherwise simply just contact the police and report it as stolen. Maybe they are able to get the carrier to track it quicker?

Joel - November 24, 2023, 5:40 am

Report the phone as stolen to the manufactuer and have their IMEI blocked and the phone bricked. If you do get the phone back you can unblock the IMEI the same way.

If you yourself are doing something illegal to acquire these phones (Which I assume you are) you're shit out of luck and got played. Game meets Game, and you lost.

roadman69 - November 24, 2023, 7:12 am

(Nov 24, 2023 12:10 AM)PorchHonkee Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) nah, cops are a no go for a couple differemt reasons

Call them or insurance is gone

Crowned - November 24, 2023, 9:35 am

Like Joel said, it's best to report the IMEI to the manufacturer as stolen so their IMEI gets blocked. Apart from that - cops

PorchHonkee - November 25, 2023, 10:39 pm

if I must elaborate what my couple reasons are is her boyfriend is a manager at fedex and a couple iphones dont make it to the store, victimless crime.

also my whole family is apart of a 1%er MC sooo we just dont call the cops.
Let me add, "Sister and her boyfriend". Not your boy

LeetSpeed - November 26, 2023, 6:09 pm

(Nov 24, 2023 06:40 AM)Joel Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Report the phone as stolen to the manufactuer and have their IMEI blocked and the phone bricked. If you do get the phone back you can unblock the IMEI the same way.

If you yourself are doing something illegal to acquire these phones (Which I assume you are) you're shit out of luck and got played. Game meets Game, and you lost.

I agree. If it was a legit phone you could use a service like we have here in Canada

<https://www.devicecheck.ca/check-status-device-canada/>

Seeing as how the phones where acquired I'd say eat the loss and take it as a lesson. Invest in a counterfeit bill detector, and always check the bills. She should of waited until the regular customer came back.

quicknotion - November 26, 2023, 6:15 pm

This sounds like a setup man get out of there

Amnesiac - November 27, 2023, 5:22 am

Call the police simple as that