Thread: Bitcoin fees

So yesterday, 4 dollars to send a few bucks on cashapp. How about blockchain and other wallets currently for you guys ?

LTC/ ETH doing any better ?

4 USD isn't too expensive, neither too cheap.

LTC is much cheaper and there's plenty of other alts that are instant such as Fantom and Kaspa. But they're just not widely used by the broader audience.

But just use LTC and similar coins, low fees, fast speed.

I only use BTC and ETH when nothing else is accepted. I usually prefer USDT TRC20 (Tron network)

OK let's say 2.50 to send even 5 bucks with slow. How would LTC compare ?

LTC is usually practically free to send.

Cashapp implemented the taproot protocol years ago which allows you to send any amount of BTC over 0.001 (~$20 bucks) for free and confirms within 10-15 minutes depending on network congestion.

Transaction fees are covered by cashapp, also in-app transfers are always free regardless of BTC amount.

Litecoin is penny transactions. I use it as much as I can.

Costs me 0,06$ in fees to send any LTC amount from my Binance account, when I can pay with LTC I'm choosing it all the way over BTC, especially right now that btc fees are higher than usual.
