Thread: Anyone playing Lego Fortnite?

So basically, it's a new game mode that's on Fortnite itself, called Lego Fortnite. It's more of a Minecraft styled Fortnite but as a lego character. It's PVE, you have to craft stuff, upgrade your weapons, build a house and fight bosses and stuff. I think it's pretty fun, you can have up to 8 people playing at once and you can create up to 4 worlds I believe. Here's a screenshot :)

I haven't played it yet but I saw that some of the big name streamers were really excited about it.

Listen, at first glance and shit, I wasn't really taking it seriously at all. However, after watching some people play it and also learning more about it such as how the game progresses, what all is possible, etc, it actually looks kinda decent. I can see it being pretty fun with some friends all the same as minecraft for instance was/is for a ton of people.

There are 100% some quality of life updates that need to happen, simple one being a minimap. I think it's crazy that there's not one in the game already lol

Absolutely. Like any game that comes out, some QoL changes will definitely be needed. Hoping to see that and much more.

I hardly ever play fornite but I guess it would hurt to try lego fornite out. I did watch the eminem event though where they showed some elements of it.

I've never been one for fortnite at all. I'm more of a hardware fps player. I play a ton of apex and have gotten to masters etc. Lego looks like a cod zombie competition game mode. If I ever play fortnite I might go this route. Well see how it goes

It's not a zombie game mode at all in any way lol, it's more of a free building and level up your tools along the way type of game. The more you upgrade your village, the more stuff you unlock to build
