Thread: Fighting for freedom of speech.

Freedom of speech is the most important human right of all. But most internet forums don't allow it. Consider this. Ever see the movie "They Live!" It is a lose metaphor for what is actually going on. Just imagine if you lived in what the movie portrays. Internet forums would behave EXACTLY the same way! I try to speak the truth at forums. But those forums have a different definition for truth. They call it "spam." Because I use a free VPN and also go through anonymous browsers, most forums won't even let me join. Their anti-spam software just denies my registration because it resembles "spam like behavior."

When it comes to freedom of speech here in the U.S., there is more freedom of speech in Russia concerning the war in the Ukraine than there is for many subjects here in the U.S. Neither is there any way to join political forums and the like without revealing your true identity. I tried looking into things such as Express VPN and Surfshark. Because they are obfuscated VPN's. But you can't pay for them without revealing your true identity either. And trying those "scrape" proxies is too complicated. Does anybody here know a simple and free way to fool internet forums anti-spam software? I would sure appreciate it if you told me a way. (If there even is a way) Thank you.

Had similar issues when registering onto a few forums/platforms. Would be interested to hear people's thoughts on what would be the toolkit for a minimal digital footprint without losing functionality due to spam-filters and the like.

Well, that wasn't helpful at all. But there is a way of my having freedom of speech on some political forum. If I was able to find somebody actually willing to fight for freedom of speech, and was willing to let their true identity be known, they could join some forum themselves and speak up for me. Like a true "sock puppet." I would tell them what to say elsewhere and they would go there and say it. With them not being me, they couldn't get banned for being me. Then I could have my say. Who would I have them speak up for? The username I prefer is cultsmasher. All they would have to do is tell everybody at any forum that they aren't me. Because if it was me, I would say so. The reason for that being that cultsmasher would never lower himself to tell such a lie to what he considers to be ignorant worms at any forum.

Feel free to look up my username. Cultsmasher. Nobody at any forum can defeat me in debate. So they ban me instead. Though I'm not always right in the things I say. I am only right about 98% of the time. Should you ever want to discuss things with me, I go by "disobey" at freethought forum. Though at the truth zone forum, I go by cultsmasher there. But be warned. Should you be a victim of some cult, prepare to have that cult smashed.

Well as I said, express vpn, N-o-r-d vpn and surfshark are all obfuscated vpn's. They will wipe out any digital fingerprint. The thing is, how to pay for it anonymously. I tried to use a debit card that I bought from Wal Mart. But as far as I could find, banks won't accept such debit card information provided through a VPN. At least not a free one like I use.

freedom of speech and hiding behind vpn are different matter altogether.

why need to hide?
