Thread: What Would YOU Do If You Won The Lottery?

GR305 - December 15, 2023, 10:14 pm

I realize the likelihood any of us wins the lottery is extraordinarily low, but I still think there are benefits to pondering on the question.

A huge benefit of asking it and seeing what comes up is that you quickly get a glimpse of your value structure and get to assess whether the one you're building is one that future you would want to have.

So I pass the question back to you guys: If you won the lottery, what is it that you'd be doing on a daily basis?

My answer: if I found out that I'd won the lottery, the first thing I would do is help family and once all the personal affairs got handled, I'd just go right back to my research with the occasional break to explore the world.

I've asked this in other communities and the common theme seems to be that different strokes exist for different folks.

Deany - December 16, 2023, 6:16 am

SIM-4973360 - December 16, 2023, 6:30 am

Buy bitcoin and horses.

WESTSIDE - December 16, 2023, 7:20 am

First of all, I would take my entire family, father, mother, siblings, wife, cousins, aunts, uncles, etc. and emigrate to the USA to California. Building a company where my entire family can work, including me.

Same. Except I would just continue programming, that comes from passion.

Slumerican ? - December 16, 2023, 8:21 am

Yeah, basically my answer is the same as yours. I would help all my loved ones and then invest in some passive income business for the long term and travel around the world to see new opportunities for self-knowledge, personal growth, and visit places to bring the best of life into me spiritually and physically. :)

My Computer - December 16, 2023, 8:42 am

If I won the lottery, I'd buy a house and help my family get out of the trenches lol. I'd also invest a good portion of it.

Simply put disappear to a new state and live out the rest of my life doing something that passes the time in a fun way.

HexD - December 16, 2023, 5:05 pm

Re-invest some of it. What matters is the payroll, too many ended up broke because of improper spending.

Vitani's Mate - December 16, 2023, 6:27 pm

Nothing really, I'd probably buy a normal house in a normal neighborhood.

Buy a few things here and there. I don't really spend that much as it is.

GruntStyl - December 17, 2023, 6:25 pm

Move out further into the country somewhere. With a decent internet connection. I'd love the isolation, peace and quiet. And then get some chickens and live stock so I can be a supporter of my own food and get off relying on processed junk that seems to be everywhere.

Buy a rich house and a good, durable car. In other words, luxury living.
