Thread: Is Anyone Honestly Content With Life?

Lil Buddy - January 1, 2024, 7:07 pm

Just curious if its even possible to be or is everyone's brain just wired to always seek more?

Deany - January 1, 2024, 7:22 pm

No. I need monies to be very happy boy.

No such thing as contentment in this life user_1928375 - January 2, 2024, 5:05 am life can be bad and can be nice.we just got to live not knowing what life got there to offer to us!

Most of the time. I hate life. I hope it's better after the fact. I have moments where I'm happy but the rest of the time. The world and the people in it piss me off.. true story.

Jamika - January 2, 2024, 6:32 am

You should look for more and more , that is called being ambitious , without that you will sure be bored and your life will start to feel with no value to live it any more , so you should look for new things every day

DashPHP - January 2, 2024, 6:40 am

No way am I content with life. So much to do and learn, earn and all of that.

Can't be slowing down anytime soon.

Life is a fire that burns unseen,
a wound that aches yet isn't felt,

an always discontent contentment,
a pain that rages without hurting,

a longing for nothing but to long,
a loneliness in the midst of people,
a never feeling pleased when pleased,
a passion that gains when lost in thought.

It's being enslaved of your own free will;
it's counting your defeat a victory;
it's staying loyal to your killer.

But if it's so self-contradictory,
how can Life, when Life chooses,
bring human hearts into sympathy?

Only for relatively short moments of time before I want more.

Syndicate - January 2, 2024, 2:04 pm

You should always want more out of life. Yes, you can still be happy with where you currently are, but you always need to continue to move forward to bigger and better things.

Yanix - January 3, 2024, 7:35 pm

I may say some individuals may indeed find contentment and satisfaction in their lives, appreciating positive aspects such as fulfilling relationships, meaningful work, good health and personal accomplishments but I guess most of them are those oldies who have enjoyed their lives.

Others may face challenges or struggles that make contentment more elusive and those were the young guys.

DemonAsylum - January 3, 2024, 9:49 pm

I feel like the question is just too general. There are definitely some things in my life that I'm content with or times doing certain things that leave me feeling content. On the flip side though there are definitely also some things I want more or better of in life as well as times that leave me feeling as though it or I am not good enough. A person's entire life, everything it includes, everything about them, etc, can no way realistically be categorized under either simply being content with it all or not being content with it all. It probably also isn't the smartest or mentally healthiest idea to generalize all of that stuff as a whole under one or the other either.

TheDabDoctor - January 3, 2024, 9:56 pm

The context of the question has me confused. I should be content, I have a girlfriend, step-daughter, and a fun car but everyday I 100% wonder what I am doing wrong. I have this thing programmed into me it feels like to put myself down and doubt myself constantly. It's probably why I haven't accomplished much. Even though I beat stage 3 brain cancer and should be grateful I'm even able to work a full time job at a express lube I always feel like I could have and be more. But anytime I make a plan I give up. So I settle and have settled where I am for 5 years after beating brain cancer for the second time. But feel a major change coming soon.

Sure I think we can all agree with that, I was speaking more so on the greater scope of contentment like end of life, did I do everything I wanted type thing. Regardless happy for what you have always carry's the undertone of being unfulfilled or temporarily plateaued.

TheMedigator - January 4, 2024, 12:46 am

I go on and off being content with life to be honest,

I've been well off with cash.. I've also been poor and honestly think I was more stressed with money...

I'm currently more on the poor side but I've got enough to give my partner and kids everything they need.. Guess a bit more for the odd holiday would be nice but yeah..

Work I job I don't mind doing and that's more for my sanity and to have to structure to my life..

Top and bottom though... Even at my peak I've not felt content at times.. felt really down couple of month ago and managed to come back from it yet again... Feel "ok" at the moment.. I think it's a state of mind though..

I've got my perfect family (Partner of almost 15 years and 2 kids in early teens) and we're living comfortably, guess we're just overdue a holiday once we save for one.

PS - If anyone's ever feeling really down feel free to throw me a message, I used to run a non profit mental health charity (Out of my own money) after losing a bunch of friends to suicide over the space of a few years.. Been there myself and I know how hard it is to talk sometimes.. Might be easier to talk to a random online who will never know your identity diiiaz - January 4, 2024, 5:38 am

My life is good. My own place, GF, bunch of friends and I'm healthy.

Money could be better but that'll come.

There is a lot of negativity in this world unfortunately. It feels like that all came after Covid.. I'm trying to stay away from that and just live a positive life.

I feel that many of us have gone through the phase of thinking certain things as you mentioned were making us happy or even just keeping us from being miserable, but only to find somehow later on that neither of those are the case. It can be a tough realization too honestly, especially if you come to feel it actually made some things worse. In any case, I'm glad to hear about the changes you've made and that you're starting to be truly happy with life ?

I know some people that are genuinely content with life, but I am not one of those. I know that I'll get there some day, but for now I'm young and just want more for myself and my family. I think I'll be content whenever I have a nice house, some cars, and don't hesitate to buy things.

I can appreciate and respect that perspective you have on the whole thing. I share in some of it as well. I hope that one day you can for the most part or for the major things in life at least, be truly content as we all deserve ?

I don't know something about just knowing im going to die and everything i do or own will all be for nothing kinda just ruins everything for me. Not to mention how painful it will be to die in general. Not sure how anyone can be ok with it.

You just have to be okay with it. It happens to everyone, it's part of life. That motivates me even more. You never know when your last day is, so why spend every day moping around doing nothing. You should always live every day to it's fullest and prepare for the next day. Say you do die early, well everything that you built will be passed down to the next generation and give them a head start. If you don't die early, you've built your whole life trying to make the next day easier.

You don't think that anything you do in life is helpful, meaningful, etc to anyone or anything else? Or you feel that when your dead it will all just be void? I'm a bit confused I guess. Maybe I'm interpreting wrong though. As for dying, maybe it won't be painful. You could pass in your sleep peacefully, who knows. Again though maybe I have the wrong context you're meaning for that as well haha. Definitely have me curious to find out more of how/why you think what you do about this.

i just think the things i do in life rather they be helpful or meaningful to me or anyone else only matter to a extent when im alive. Once i die the world basically ends with me as im not going to be here. Its not like i come back as a spirt or something but that's just my point of view. As for dying i hope it is a painless death as i would expect anyone would want, i just always have thoughts in the back of my mind that as the years go by and i get older my body will start degrading and organs shutting down one by one and just having to think about having surgery's and getting cut open to fix it scares the shit out of me.

Interesting, I appreciate you being willing to share your perspective on all of that. I'm curious, do you plan on having kids? Idk if you're even in a relationship, but lets say the opportunity was there for you to do so. Do you have any interest in that?

Ecclesiastes 5:10-12

New International Version

10 Whoever loves money never has enough;
whoever loves wealth is never satisfied with their income.
This too is meaningless.

11 As goods increase,
so do those who consume them.
And what benefit are they to the owners except to feast their eyes on them?

12 The sleep of a laborer is sweet,
whether they eat little or much,
but as for the rich, their abundance permits them no sleep.

It's inherent in us, in human nature, to constantly pursue more without recognizing that true satisfaction doesn't come from getting what we desire, but from valuing what we already have.

And I would just like to add on top that I absolutely recognise my position in this life, grateful to have parents and so on.

But I feel there's just more to life than what we already have and constantly pushing for new things might not be too bad of a thing to do... so long as you appreciate the journey!

Is that an as of now thing only you think or do you expect you'll always be like that? Referring to the "never satisfied" part. Seems kind of unfortunate if you felt you were never satisfied with your family, friendships, love life / significant other, and lots of other things too could be good examples I'm sure. Maybe you're more just referring to like goals for yourself though and being content with work, money, status, and things of that nature.

Glad to hear you're grateful for all you have at any time though, that's what of course matters the most.

Agreed that it's natural to always want more. Even if you had all of the money in the world, you'd still WANT to do things with it as well. So even that is only just 1 battle of being content haha.
