SanDisk clip sport UPDATE any clip sport firmware via OTG cable using android device otg cable
Root moto g 5G (2022)XT2213-2?
Help please...

Nemo5 - January 25, 2024, 2:30 am

To update the firmware, there are a video about it:
[youtube]<https://m.youtube.com/watch?v=EGS-jhZumNw>[/youtube]

For rooting your moto g 5G (2022)XT2213-2 you first must to know how the device's bootloader unlocking process works.

I need this can someone out me on, only thing I d, my phone is brand new. UT us a galaxy a03s. I don't think it is able to be rooted yet HELLP PLS joeplumber3000 - November 1, 2024, 5:57 pm

For using a phone you will need need a rooted phone (Mandatory) and a custom written ADFU application to access the Sandisk mp3 player when it gets put into ADFU mode.

The main reason why it is so secretive on how to do all of this is because people like me don't want lames making money off of what we worked really hard to do extensive research on so that we could achieve the same result.

Real hackers do things themselves, do the research, take the time and study, break down code, and tear things apart.

While I fully realize the situation, there is a hustle to converting these devices.

The easiest method is to somehow acquire a laptop and the necessary USB cable.
Dont even think you are going to be doing this over a Android Tablet if it isnt rooted, get it out of your head.

The Sandisk Clip was manufactured to be accessed via ADFU mode with Actions Firmware Tools on a Windows PC.

I have confirmed wiped Version 1.03, 1.07, 1.10, 1.13 and even 1.14.

1.14 those bastard did something really tricky with the partitions, and it took some skill but I was able to find the method to do it.

I am not for free. If you dont have computer access, dont bother messaging me, and I fully know how to verify if you are on my side or not.

Meant for the clip sport not the go, buy it or don't idc just giving ppl an option

Zi.Gr - December 1, 2024, 9:14 pm

I figured it out. Totally easy. Must have android 13 or lower and otg cable. I have the firmware and modded otg app. Will share private. $300 only because can't make shit for family in prison and I got kids that need help. I hate charging but I know you guys can make your money back quick. I know the method for both Clip sport and go.

Also working on the score tablets with a custom board replacement that will give 5g access via sim and once done, I'll have a custom clone lock screen app made.

Oh and I'm currently trying to figure how to make a custom firmware for the mp3s that will allow you to make a custom name and id menu with fake days. Hopefully soon I'll figure it out.

We are getting Wi-Fi here soon at the low. Anyone else?

If you're interested in unlocking (jailbreaking) your SanDisk Gen2 or Gen3 player, such as the SanDisk Sport Clip or SanDisk Sport Go, feel free to message me! I can help you remove all restrictions, making your device function like the original factory version. This includes eliminating the need for revalidation.

Requirements:

An OTG cable for the Sport Clip

An OTG SD card reader for the Sport Clip Go

For more details, message me directly or reply here!

TheTechForge - July 8, 2025, 4:38 pm

You don't need a rooted phone for the SanDisk MP3, however if your trying to do the keefe tablet Score 7t or 7c you need to have a rooted phone or dev USB options unlocked to connect to the tablets brom mode. So in a nutshell...

Rooted phones unlock:

1. Access to /dev/bus/usb/ or /dev/usb/ — where all USB devices are mounted as raw device nodes.
2. Ability to use tools like mtkclient to open these devices directly (via pyusb/libusb).
3. Control of USB kernel drivers — detach kernel drivers that may block access (common on unrooted phones).

Without root:

You can only access USB devices via high-level interfaces (like ADB or MTP).

No access to raw USB device files or endpoints.

No ability to directly issue control transfers needed for BROM handshakes.

Skithesky - August 21, 2025, 3:28 pm

I already have everything to break the gen2 player, but am trying to find firmware to play video that doesn't cut off the left side of the screen, have a blue tint, audio issues, or any other issues that occurs with the other firmware out there. Anyone have custom firmware that works for playing video?

Also I can't seem to get the player into firmware update mode to flash the 212A demo software from the BOP version 1.01. Holding vol up when plugging in doesn't work. Anyone know how to get it into update mode on ver 1.01?

Terry Thompson - August 22, 2025, 4:46 pm

Volume up button is probably broke. Short it out with tweezers when u plug up. Also anybody needs jailbreak files for clip sport or clip sport go with technical support hit me up

I have firmware that plays videos and works without issues, also have instructions how to convert videos right way.

Since im the one who found it and modded - may as well sell it, unlike others, who resell stuff that dont belongs to em.

O, price - 500$, in btc or eth.

Feel free to cry about price, not gonna change it :)

I did not pay anything, i just helped to make it, cause my original program to flash these players needed root. Guy, who paid for development, posted video on youtube like 2 or 3 years ago. App was sold to Brooks with clause not to resell, just for personal use. Firmware was done by me also, one that play mp3 and video without distortion.

I'm curious as to the firmware you use Thompson I have 2 that do video playback but nothing with that menu selection. Also you need to work on your converter to make that full screen. Took a lot of work but I finally got a converter doing full screen with no cutoff, auto brightness on dark scenes and runs smooth with no audio clicks. I hit you up on tg, maybe we can swap into on this.

Shit, regular ffmpeg works perfectly.

These are options:

-c:v amv -c:a adpcm_ima_amv -pix_fmt yuvj420p -vf
"scale=148:128:force_original_aspect_ratio=decrease,crop=128:in_h:10:0,pad=160:128:32:-1:color =black" -vstrict -1 -r 30 -ac 1 -ar 22050 -block_size 735
