Thread: Gaming chair recommendation

Yin Yang - January 12, 2024, 2:02 pm

Alright fellas, what's a solid gaming chair that you'd recommend? I have an office chair, however the arm rests are starting to bother me. I feel like I'm boxed and would like to move my arms freely. I'm an OG and would just use a folding chair, but my bottom gets bothered and sore and I tried placing a memory foam pillow on-top of it, but it just feels odds.

Preferably on Amazon, and my budget is around $200- not really trying to spend more than that for a gaming chair.

I haven't found any gaming chair that I found really comfortable. I use a GT Player off Amazon and it's pretty good. I'm able to sit here all day if I need to. Others may have a better suggestion.

I have a GT Racer. Its the bluetooth speaker one. It's comfy and I've had it for a few years now. The hydraulic thingy went out on it, feelsbadman.

I've got a Razer Iskur which has served me pretty well now for almost 2 years:

I used to have a Secretlab Titan which was awesome except the arm rests disintegrated quite quickly. Might go back to Secretlab after I've had enough of this one.

Mine doesn't have the bluetooth speaker but it does have the power lumbar support that vibrates. I can't find the power cable though, lost it a while back.

My arm rests are padded and they haven't needed to be tightened or anything. I play on controller as well. I'll link you to the one I have - <https://a.co/d/dHUKpDs>

Your picture is absolute porn. Very nice setup bro.

I recently got one for christmas. I honestly prefer fabric when you're looking for one. It's extremely comfortable. My leather chairs always ended up cracking and I notice it makes me sweat more, fabric gaming chairs 100%.

This. Most gaming chairs suck ergonomically. If you can afford Herman Miller or any of the brands that are Herman Miller-like (There are a few companies that hover right on the edge of infringing on HM patents without stepping over that are quite nice), I'd go with them.

I agree. I think gaming chairs are overrated and they were marketed so well to "gamers" that it kind of became the norm. Some people like them and that's fine, I've just never found one I felt truly comfortable in, including the SecretLabs chairs. A good office chair is better in my opinion with good lumbar support.

i also recommend a good office chair your back will thank you

Yin Yang - January 29, 2024, 4:26 pm

I ended up getting this one:

A solid armless chair, and not too expensive

I would go for something relatable to the work I'd be doing also would try to match color schemes..

I have a all white gaming chair needs replacement this year lowkey.

MarkGold - January 29, 2024, 5:40 pm

I have recently got a Razer Iskur which I can say is the best so far compare with all chairs i had

I myself have been using a chair from Kraken Chairs for over a year, it is not a high-end product, but it will fit into your budget, and the comfort of use and quality of workmanship are adequate to its price. I can wholeheartedly recommend chairs from them ?
