Thread: For Lounge Head Award Winners - How much did you post in Lounge after award?

Hackers - January 16, 2024, 8:03 pm

Just curious if other loungehead award winners can chime in on how much they've stuck around the lounge post-award. I'm on the hunt for the award, but 500 posts in Lounge in 30 days is no joke. Of course, I've heard this used to be harder to get... I can't imagine I'll post in Lounge nearly as frequently once this is done, not going to lie, but it has been nice to meet some new members.

oRequiem - January 16, 2024, 8:23 pm

When I went for it, it was 1,000 posts within a month. So once I received the award, my posting slowed down by 80-90% lol.

Eran - January 17, 2024, 4:17 am

Maybe 30% less? Not really sure. I got mine during Oktoberfest though.

Deany - January 17, 2024, 4:24 am

This. Well that is one way of earning bytes.

I got my loungehead award the same month I got a pumpkin during October.

(Jan 17, 2024 05:38 AM)Deany Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Frick flipping man just go HARD in sports bet

it's slowly killing me to see kids flipping away so many bytes. Like yes, I get it - it can be exciting, there is a thrill, etc...

But I also understand math, statistics, and can see Stanley/the house wins every time, over time.

People in convo act like flipping is some sort of achievement, as if it is not random, as if they possess a skill. No. In my mind someone who has 100k from flipping is just as shite as someone with 0 from flipping. If they think it's anything but luck, or if they don't acknowledge that flipping is an unskilled coin flip, then I feel bad for them.

I'm always chiming in with some anti-gambling talk in chat, but most do not listen. They just continue buying bytes, gambling it away on flips, and pretending they don't have a problem.

Bastille - January 17, 2024, 5:08 am

Got mine during the Octoberfest, otherwise I couldn't get it I think, 500 posts only in the lounge is not that easy if everyone is not participating with you

It's mostly random unless there's an award to go for, then my posting is up by over 100%.

Jake Johnson - January 17, 2024, 6:35 am

I remember taking on that grind like about a year or so ago. It felt like a tall task and towards the end it did get challenging. It was fun though starting new topics to discuss. The hard thing is if others don't want to keep contributing to the discussion to keep it going. The lounge is by far where I am the most active. I don't nearly post as much as I did when I was going for lounge head but when I see something that piques my interest I do enjoy joining in the discussion.

I should be approaching 50% on the award soon and will try to get ahead of the daily-average needed so I can relax next week :)

Trust - January 17, 2024, 10:48 am

I almost cheated for the lounge head award by accident, but it wasn't quite enough posting to get there and I didn't have time to pursue it further.

PM me for details lol

Charlie Sheen - January 17, 2024, 3:09 pm

I got my lounge head award during Octoberfest 2022. I currently have 1753 posts in The Lounge so I'd say I stuck around the lounge. It's usually the best section for getting to know someone outside of the convo.

Monero-chan - January 23, 2024, 1:37 pm

I stopped posting by a lot by the time I got it, but I lost it somehow. I'm assuming you have to post at least somewhat to keep it?

Komodo - January 23, 2024, 1:55 pm

Somewhere around the 2800 post range.

Too lazy to do the math.

A little strategy that I used to help get my lounge numbers higher was trying to create threads that spark good conversation. This typically leads to multiple replies, and may help get you to increase your lounge numbers.

I will still post here, I love the community.

We need to get everyone in the same page.

Another reason why I like the lounge is because I seem to find more hackuman eggs here.

When I tell you I'm determined to get this Lounge Head... I mean it. Especially since my Daily Ninja got reset back to start, that makes me want the LH even more. What you think I'm doing up right now, putting in some overtime to get to the finish line.

I admire you homie!

I'm on the hunt for the award, but 500 posts in Lounge in 30 days is no joke. Of course, I've heard this used to be harder to get... I can't imagine I'll post in Lounge nearly as frequently once this is done, not going to lie, but it has been nice to meet some new members.

I did like 643 posts in 48 hours lol.

I don't post much anymore

All of those were in the lounge? I'm guessing this was back when the place a was a little more active? I'm prepared mentally to leave 200 replies, but there just aren't enough active threads in the lounge to do that... and I don't want to be accused to grave digging if I reply to something that's not fresh.. so that is sort of a damper into me completing my mission.

Haha I feel that.

I remember when I did my lounge "push" that it started feeling robotic where I wasn't digesting any of the threads I was reading, just looking "just enough" to know how to respond & then writing my reply. I opened 10-20 tabs at a time and just processed them like that in batches.

honestly, grave digging is only really a problem when you go back into the years. It can be a little iffy if you go back several months, but honestly as long as its a relevant thread you should be fine. Just don't reply to old intro threads or content that is specific to its time period / outdated.

Right.. Time to gravedig some posts from 9 months ago. I'll start each reply with "Nodes said it's okay to reply"

I personally don't have a problem with grave digging. I feel like as long as the reply is relevant, and the conversation is meaningful then it shouldn't be a problem.. but others don't feel that way. I've seen multiple members scold new members for replying to threads that were merely 12-18 months old.

LOL... I actually laughed out loud at that one. ???
