Thread: Long Island Serial killer suspect Rex Heuermann has been charged fourth time

The Pact - January 16, 2024, 10:16 pm

Prosecutors alleged that Heuermann was alone while his now-estranged wife was out of town with their children when Brainard-Barnes was killed in July 2007, ABC New York reports.

This allegedly fit a pattern of him being alone during the other alleged murders which granted him "unfettered time to execute his plans for each victim without any fear that his family would uncover or learn of his involvement in these crimes," prosecutors said in the court documents released Tuesday. prosecutors claimed that burner phones were discovered that connected Heuermann to online searches for sex workers as well as porn searches, audio accounts of rape and a search that read: "autopsy photos of female." He allegedly used the alias "Andy" to communicate with sex workers online, authorities said.

At the last hearing on July 30, prosecutors shared "voluminous" amounts of evidence with the defense including DNA records, data from electronic devices and notes from searches of his home.

A date for the trial has not been set. Heuermann is being held without bail in Suffolk County Jail in Riverhead.

Several other bodies were found near Gilgo Beach, including some that have not been identified. Last month, officials asked for the public's help in identifying one of the victims, known as "Asian Doe." The body of the unidentified Asian person was discovered in 2011. The victim was a biological male but wearing women's clothing. The victim was likely of Han Chinese descent. No suspects have been named.
