Thread: Money or titles?

Jamika - January 29, 2024, 1:08 am

So what u prefer from two? To have a good titles or to have more cash earned?

For me lower cash with higher title would be better

diiiaz - January 29, 2024, 1:17 am

Gimme all the cash baby.

DashPHP - January 29, 2024, 1:20 am

I think the money would do me better. Eventually I want to get into philanthropy and that would take a lot of cash if I wanted to help the masses.

You can use your title to get cash lol

What life is teaching me is that CASH always wins in the long term. In the long run, it's always the $.

You could make good money with a title, but not millions and trillions as a potential entrepreneur would.

Komodo - January 29, 2024, 1:25 am

Who cares what your title is, money.

Literally this. Money over everything.

Buzzdrone - January 29, 2024, 2:12 am

Money unless the titles include all the benefits that usually come with them. Former high ranking government officials usually get some pretty sweet medical still after all without having to do any more of the work...

My-Ex - January 29, 2024, 2:43 am i could even sell you my HF title if it means anything much to you cos for me, it's Money all the way.

Riggs - January 29, 2024, 2:52 am

Thought this said money or titties.

You all dissappoint me.

HOMODIN - January 29, 2024, 3:02 am

For me it's 50/50, when it comes to work I would prefer to do something that I'm happy with n get decent pay for...I mean, what would I do with a fancy high title, tons of heat on my back and crap pay, that's not healthy nor does the title pay any bills. Currently I got something like 35-40% more than what people in the same role as me get (not including the entry level positions) and my title is something like "on-site support". I'm the most expensive support person that my company has and I get a better salary than my boss gets.

Money (and health) over title any time.

ItsMeFox - January 29, 2024, 5:21 am for sure the money and with the money you can buy anything!

Hackers - January 29, 2024, 5:30 am for me it's a balance, but cash > titles. The cash I earn is usually in line with the title, so it goes hand in hand, but I did take a raise w/ a title that in my opinion doesn't sound as good - but is the same job.

It depends on what values in life you prefer. A lot of money won't do you any good if you can't use it properly. They can easily make you unhappy and lead you to destruction.

A title can't do anything, maybe just gain people's trust.

In the world it's about whether you can make a big name out of the minority so that everyone knows you. You have to earn fame and honor, it doesn't just happen overnight. Most of the time it was like that, only when someone famous dies, then they gain even more recognition and fame.

This is well said. The Cash and Title usually fall in line. And it's the same with my job. However, if it didn't and I had to pick then I'm picking the cash. I have a family to feed and bills to pay. The title means nothing to me without the income.

Totally agree with that , you need both , also titles is not only written on paper but u can use it good

Monero-chan - January 29, 2024, 12:56 pm

Cash all the way baby!

MarkGold - January 30, 2024, 9:26 am
