Come on, guys. The filename attached is called "ghosttrack". A simple google reveals this open source python library: github.com/HunxByts/GhostTrack, claims to be a "Useful tool to track location or mobile number". Is this the only thing the text document links to? Looking at the source code, all it does is:

IP Tracker - makes a call to ipwho.is/<ip address here>

Show your IP - makes a call to api.ipify.org Phone Tracker - uses another python library called "phonelibraries" to do several different types phone number parsing

Username Tracker - takes the username you gave it and loops through a list of social media sites, tacking on the username to the end of it

Born - April 3, 2024, 12:26 pm

There is a solid tool online right now that can be utilized that will not only reveal the IP address of the user who clicked on it but will attempt to retrieve the exact location via the web browser and GPS, resulting in far more accurate results. Would encourage users to do research.

(Apr 2, 2024 07:44 AM)notagh0st Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Come on, guys. The filename attached is called "ghosttrack". A simple google reveals this open source python library: github.com/HunxByts/GhostTrack, claims to be a "Useful tool to track location or mobile number". Is this the only thing the text document links to? Looking at the source code, all it does is:

IP Tracker - makes a call to ipwho.is/<ip address here>

Show your IP - makes a call to api.ipify.org Phone Tracker - uses another python library called "phonelibraries" to do several different types phone number parsing

Username Tracker - takes the username you gave it and loops through a list of social media sites, tacking on the username to the end of it
thanks

LoI) Need to spent time around, and ask people in the comment box what is what. You will get points.

Is there any screen shot? Short review of what is it written, etc?

madplamtrees - June 22, 2025, 7:20 am

DM me, I'll give you one for free based on the below:

```
? GHOSTTRACK v2.0 - README

GhostTrack is a powerful, and free OSINT (Open Source Intelligence) tool designed to extract metadata about phone numbers and IP addresses using publicly available sources.

This script is built to replace and outperform shady paid tools like "ghosttrack.txt" found on underground forums — by giving you more power, transparency, and zero cost.

? FEATURES:

- IP address geolocation from multiple sources:

- ipinfo.io
- ip-api.com
- Shodan, AbuseIPDB, GreyNoise links

- Phone number OSINT:

- Opens NumLookup, Truecaller, Sync.me
- Compatible with PhoneInfoga

- Clean and simple CLI-based interface

- No logging, tracking, or shady backends

- 100% legal and ethical usage (you're responsible for that)

? REQUIREMENTS:

- Python 3.x

- Internet connection

- `curl` or `webbrowser` module (built-in)

? USAGE:

1. Make the script executable:

```
chmod +x ghosttrack_v2.py
```

2. Run it:

`./ghosttrack_v2.py 8.8.8.8`

`./ghosttrack_v2.py +14155552671`

? FILES:

- `ghosttrack_v2.py` — the main tool

- `ghosttrack.txt` — optional one-liner version or download link (optional)

? LEGAL DISCLAIMER:

This tool is provided for educational, lawful research and threat analysis only. Misuse is strictly discouraged. Respect privacy and jurisdictional laws.
